Conferees Near Final Accord on Labor Bill

Measure Closer To Senate Version; Passage Assured, Veto Is Question

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Congressional conferees yesterday reached all-but-final agreement on a comprehensive labor bill. Only one relatively minor point is still in dispute.

Complete settlement is expected by this morning. Then, the bill with its sweeping revision of the Wagner Act, its permission to enjoin paralyzing national strikes, its creation of an independent mediation service, will probably reach both houses of Congress by the middle of next week.

Its passage is assured. The only issues in doubt are whether President Truman will veto it, and if so, whether the veto will be overridden. On this last question, the Senate is the critical body. House approval of the measure by more than the two thirds necessary to override is almost assumed.

As the bill emerges from conference, it is much closer in form and content to the measure which passed the Senate than to the more restrictive bill which the House approved.

Senate Makes Concessions

But the Senate conferees made many concessions to the House. Most were matters of wording, but some were of substance.

Even so, it appeared yesterday that none of the modifications of the original Senate bill would be likely to change the votes of as many as seven Senators who initially voted for the Senate measure. It would take this many switched ballots to decrease the Senate majority below the two-thirds point.

In two days of steady conference negotiations, the major developments were these:

1. The House dropped its provisions banning the union shop and industry-wide bargaining; abandoned its insistence on a workers' "Bill of Rights"; gave up on granting individual employers the right to obtain injunctions against outlawed strikes.

Changes in NLRB

2. Contrary to earlier reports, the conferees agreed to retain the National Labor Relations Board. Two new members will be added, however. Furthermore, the judicial and the investigation-prosecution functions will be split. The board members them-

Pair Hold Up Auto Dealer, Get $10,845

John W. Barnes, 33, a Norfolk, Va., automobile dealer, was held up and robbed of $10,845 at 9th st. and Maine ave. sw. early yesterday.

Barnes told police two bandits forced him at gun point to the Occoquan wharf about 2:30 a. m., shortly after he parked his car nearby and arranged for its shipment to Norfolk.

The men took $400 from his wallet, then stripped him of his money belt, containing the rest of the cash, he said. They also took his wrist watch, but it was found later on the dock.

After striking him on the head with the butt of the gun, the two bandits fled in a car bearing Penn[illegible] tags, Barnes said.

Von Papen Injured By Fellow Prisoner

Nuernberg, May 28 (U.P.).—Franz von Papen, 69 former Nazi diplomat now serving a prison term at Regensburg, was reported today to have been attacked and wounded seriously in the hospital ward of the prison by a former SS officer Wednesday.

Franz von Paper, jr., said his father's nose and cheekbone were broken and his eyelid and lips were torn when the SS man, believed to be insane, struck him several times and then kicked him as he fell to the floor.

Unions Scorn Ford Pay Hike Minus Pension

CIO Rejects Equivalent Of 15c Hourly Increase; Salary Employes Raised

Detroit, May 28 (AP).—The CIO-United Auto Workers today rejected an offer from the Ford Motor Co. of the equivalent of a 15-cent an hour wage increase for 130,000 production employes because it did not include an old-age retirement plan.

The offer called for an 11½-cent hourly wage increase plus six paid annual holidays, a pattern similar to that accepted in other auto plants.

With a retirement plan, a spokesman added, the wage offer might be acceptable.

10% Hike for Salaried Employes

However, Ford went ahead with plans for a 10 per cent hike for 20,000 salaried employes, to become effective June 1. It was announced in conjunction with the offer to the UAW-CIO.

Richard T. Leonard, UAW-CIO vice president and national director of its Ford department, accused the company of attempting to "limit negotiations on vital issues" by eliminating discussion of the pension proposal.

"The issues between the company and the union involve more than just a wage increase," Leonard said in a joint statement with Thomas Thompson, head of the union negotiating committee. "Equally important factors are the human needs of the workers

Thirty leading Hollywood figures will be called to Washington to testify in a House Un-American Activities Committee Probe of the Communist influence in the movie industry, it was announced yesterday.

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), a committee member, said he had received a telegram from Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. H.) stating that 30 subpenas would be issued for members of the film industry.

Witnesses will include actors, writers, directors and producers, Nixon said. June 16 has been tentatively set as a date for the beginning of hearings.

Arlington Votes $1,776,000 For New Elementary Schools

By Donald Olsen
Post Reporter

Arlington County voted itself $1,776,000 worth of elementary school construction by a margin of 104 votes in Tuesday's referendum.

This was revealed yesterday by complete unofficial returns in the election, which went for a popularly elected school board by a landslide 9-5 majority.

A five-man board of canvassers will check precinct totals at the county courthouse this afternoon.

Soundly defeated by Arlington voters were three other school bond issues totaling $4,214,000, and one for general county improvement at $5,150,000.

County political observers expressed surprise yesterday at what they called the "selectivity" of voters, who discarded a $655,000 kindergarten program, $530,000 for full day sessions in first and second grades, and $3,029,000 for secondary school building.

Only two county precincts, Arlington and Ballston, gave clean-sweep approval to the entire six-million-dollar school bond issue.

Of all the 11 Arlington precincts which rolled in a total of over 10,000 votes, only two—Arlington and Glencarlyn—voted for the gen-

Ballot Boxes Stolen in Kansas City

Votes Are Vital To Investigation Of Alleged Frauds In Axtell Election

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

A Senate investigation of alleged Missouri election frauds was interrupted yesterday by news that ballot boxes vital to the case had been looted from a Kansas City vault.

Attorney General Clark, who was testifying before a Judiciary Subcommittee when the theft became known, said at once the FBI would be ordered to investigate.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), had called Clark to explain why the Justice Department failed to instigate criminal prosecutions after a probe into the 1946 Missouri primaries by the FBI.

In the Democratic primary Representative Roger C. Slaughter, an Administration critic, was defeated by Enos Axtell, backed by President Truman and the Pendergast machine. Axtell was defeated in the general election by Albert L. Reeves, jr., a Republican.

Seventy-One Indicated

Although the Justice Department took no action after an investigation by the FBI, a Kansas City grand jury this week returned 81 indictments against 71 persons and recommended a complete recount of all ballots.

"It is our opinion," the grand jury reported, "that Roger C. Slaughter in this race was deprived of the nomination by a fraudulent miscount of votes and other types of fraud."

Senator Kem (R., Mo.) charged on the floor of the Senate last Friday that the FBI had not made the most of the case and demanded a congressional investigation.

Clark told the subcommittee yesterday that the FBI investigation had been "preliminary" to determine if a thorough probe was justified. It did not, he said, uncover any evidence of conspiracy or other violation of Federal law.

Vault Blows Open

"If any violation shows up," Clark declared, "you can bet your bottom dollar I'll prosecute them."

The Kansas City theft was revealed to the subcommittee by Ferguson, who read a telegram handed to him by Kem, who sat opposite Clark throughout the hearing. He read:

Last night primary ballots stolen from election vaults."

The telegram was signed by A. S. Hewitt, whom Kem identified as "a precinct captain in my ward." A few minutes later Kem was told by telephone that the

Mother Better; Truman Plans Return Today

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Grandview, Mo., May 28.—President Truman plans to fly back to Washington tomorrow, so much has his 94-year-old mother's condition improved.

"The news is good," Mr. Truman told reporters as he left his mother's bedside late this evening. "She's holding her own."

"Doctors think that it will be safe enough for me to return to the White House tomorrow."

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross announced later that President Truman would take off in the Sacred Cow right after breakfast, weather permitting. He said that Mrs. Bess Truman, the First Lady, and Miss Margaret Truman, their daughter, will accompany the President.

The "Cow" will take off from the Fairfax Airport in Kansas City, Ross said, and should be airborne by 8 a. m. That would put it in Washington between 2 and 3 p. m. EST.

Mrs. Martha Ellen Truman, the President's mother, sat up in her straight-back rocker for a half hour this afternoon.

Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, the White House physician, said that she was "still making good progress." He said her pulse was "full," her temperature normal, and her respiration normal.

Some members of the presidential party regarded Mrs. Truman's comeback as "almost miraculous." When the Chief Executive, her first-born, arrived 12 days ago, she was believed to be near death.

Jail Break Conviction Tentatively Set Aside

District Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday tentatively set aside jury verdicts of guilty brought against two policemen charged with negligence in the escape of two convicted murderers from District Jail, on April 3, 1946.

The judge's order arresting judgment related to a jury's guilty verdict against Hubert Davis, 30, and Oscar Sanderlin, 39, on May 2. It permits the prosecution to appeal the ruling to the District Court of Appeals.

In entering the order, Justice Holtzoff ruled that the crime of negligence in permitting escape was one of English common law and as such was not applicable to "hirelings of wardens or sheriffs." He cited a similar case in New Jersey where the judge ruled as he did and was later upheld by the State Supreme Court.

Section 301, Title 49, of the D. C. Code of 1940, states that the common law is applicable here excepting where it is changed by statute. Section 107, Title 22, of the same code provides that anyone convicted of a criminal offense governed by common law and not by statute is subject to a fine, the maximum of which is $1000, or five years in jail, or both.

At their trial, Davis and Sanderlin claimed they were not properly trained in guarding jail prisoners before being appointed temporary jail guards. Their negligence, prosecution said, permitted Joseph Medley and Earl McFarland to escape. The two were later recaptured and subsequently executed.

The defendants testified they were trussed up by the two murderers after they permitted the two the freedom of the prison recreation room and joined with them in playing cards. The murderers climbed through a ventilator shaft and down the side of the jail with a rope of bed linen.

Justice Holtzoff admitted the case was without precedent in District criminal history and that he had to look into the "obscure and antiquated language of early decisions" to arrive at his own.

Assistant United States Attorney John Conliff, who prosecuted the case, said he was studying the judge's decision and "considering" appealing it.

Tons of Water Unleashed in Canal Break

5 Anglers Reported Imperiled But Manage To Scramble to Safety

The historic Chesapeake and Ohio Canal yesterday afternoon broke through its dike and sent hundreds of tons of water pouring through to the Potomac, approximately 300 feet south.

According to U. S. Park, Metropolitan and Harbor Police no one was marooned by the surge of water.

One officer said, however, he had heard a report that five fishermen, who had been caught at a point near the Potomac when the deluge broke, managed to get to safety.

The point at which the break occurred was about 30 feet below Canal Road at Weaver Place, and almost directly under the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad spur track. The actual point of breakage, was at a four-foot culvert under the B. & O. bridge.

Water Falls Foot and a Half

The break is believed to have occurred at about 4 p. m. Mrs. Julia King, of 6100 Ridge dr., Brookmont, Md., a lock-keeper for the Brookmont Locks of the canal, said she received a call from the Wilkins-Rogers Flour Mill shortly after 4 p. m.

Mill officials wanted to know "what had happened to the water." Mrs. King said she checked the water, which had been about 39 feet at 4 p. m., and found that it had dropped a foot and a half. She called the park police and proceeded to close the locks. She said she closed one panel at 4:55 and the other at 5:25. It takes about 20 minutes to close a panel, she said.

In addition to the Wilkins-Rogers Flour Mill, the District of Columbia Paper Mill generates electricity from water in the canal, Mrs. King said. She has worked at the locks for 18 years. She remembered a number of small breaks in the dikes, "but nothing like this," she said.

Police were notified that there was a break in the canal dike at some point near Washington. They did not locate the breakage point until nearly 5 o'clock, however. Sergt. Walter H. Sconyas of Park Police said he reached the Canal rd. and Weaver pl. "a few minutes before 5," and found the water rushing through the break and down the rocky terrain to the river.

Break Widens

A passer-by, Richard Hunt of Fairfax, Va., who is employed in Bethesda, said he left his job at 4:45 and reached the Weaver pl.-Canal st. intersection about 25

House Rejects Move to Boost Soil Payments

Economy Drive Survives Test But Another Vote Seen

BULLETIN

The House passed and sent to the Senate last night a $847,601,976 agriculture appropriation bill for 1948, with total reductions of $340,969,342 below the President's budget requests.

By The Associated Press

The House Appropriations Committee's economy drive survived a severe test yesterday when the House voted, 156-151, against increasing soil conservation payments to farmers by $134,385,710.

An amendment to the 805-million-dollar Agriculture Department supply bill to boost the payments from $165,614,290 to 300 million dollars lost by five-vote margin on a count by tellers. It was offered by Representative Cannon (D., Mo.) and supported solidly by Democrats.

The narrow margin indicated that supporters of the amendment will force a roll-call count before the bill finally is passed.

Funds for research in agriculture marketing were boosted 50 per cent after an argument that Russia is outstripping the United States in that field.

Action on Tellers Vote

The action came on a tellers' vote of 116 to 109—subject to a roll-call tally later when the House completes consideration of specific allotments in the agricultural appropriations bill for the year beginning July 1.

The increase, sponsored by Representative Cannon (D., Mo.), would boost the research marketing figure from $6,000,000 to $9,500,000. It was approved after Representative Toby Morris (D., Okla.) told the House the Soviet Union has made "great strides" in agriculture—including some unmatched in this country.

The marketing research boost was the first change in the Appropriations Committee bill. The committee voted funds totaling $805,143,000 after making cuts of more than $383,427,724 in the amount approved by the Budget Bureau.

Earlier, by a standing vote of 92 to 34, the House rejected an attempt to slash another $250,000 from the funds for the Secretary of Agriculture's office.

The House chopped an additional $400,000 from funds for the office of solicitor of the Agriculture Department, cutting the allotment from $2,425,000 to $2,025,000.

Another $200,000 was cut by the House from the $628,000 recommended for the office of foreign

$500 Annual Benefit

Senate Committee Approves Teacher Pay Increase Bill

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

The Senate District Committee yesterday approved the Washington teacher pay increase bill. Earlier the committee voted against special salary treatment for "superior" personnel who lack masters' degrees.

Senator William B. Umstead (D.-N. C.), lost by a 6 to 5 vote his proposal to let 196 teachers, now in a "superior" pay group, receive the $500 annual benefit that the bill gives to those with a master's degree.

School officials explained the group of 196, most of them in the high schools, are those whose experience was accepted as 'being equal to a masters' degree when the degree was made a requirement for high school teachers. In the group are 27 whose pay is $4150—they would be frozen at that salary by the bill. Others could go to the $4000 top for all teachers without master's degrees.

With Umstead's proposal sidetracked, the committee agreed to treat 35 school principals who do not have master's degrees the same as teachers—they could reach a top salary $500 below the top for those

52-34 Vote Not Enough To Override Possible Veto

Nonretroactive Version of Knutson Measure Goes to Conference Today

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate yesterday passed without change a nonretroactive version of the House-passed Knutson bill slashing individual income taxes 10½ to 30 per cent, starting July 1.

The vote was 52 to 34—short of the two-thirds majority required to override an expected veto. Before the vote, every Democratic amendment went down to defeat, including two moves to boost benefits in the lower brackets.

Tentative plans called for ironing out House-Senate differences at a conference this morning and sending the completed bill to the White House next Monday.

Senate conferees are expected to stand pat for their one major change in the Knutson measure—provision that only one-half of the reduction apply to 1947 incomes.

Senate Version Outlined

The House bill dated the cuts retroactively from January 1 1947. The Senate bill makes July 1 the effective date.

If conferees, as expected, take the Senate version, it would work out this way:

The 10½ to 30 per cent cuts would be fully reflected in payroll withholdings for the last six months of this year. Next March however, when a taxpayer made his final return for 1947, he would be allowed only a half-rate reduction for the full calendar year. In 1948 and thereafter the full cut would apply.

GOP sponsors said the bill would cost the Treasury 3.2 billion dollars in tax collections in the next fiscal year but taxpayers will save four billion dollars in the long run. The 3.2 billion estimate is based on a normal lag in tax collections.

Democrats Hit Measure

Only 7 Democrats crossed party lines to vote with 45 Republicans for passage of the bill. Thirty-two Democrats, joined by two Republicans, voted "No."

Before the final count, Democrats held the floor for an hour, slapping the legislation as a boon to the wealthy and a threat to sound Government financing.

Said Senate Minority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Dem., Ky.): "All we can save at this time should be used to redeem our huge national debt."

Here's how the bill slashes taxes:

Taxable incomes of up to $1000—30 per cent cut.

Between $1000 and about $1400—a "notch" cut ranging downward from 30 to 20 per cent.

Between $1400 and $80,000—20 per cent cut.

Between $80,000 and $302,000—15 per cent cut.

Over $302,000—10½ per cent cut.

Labor Party Backs Bevin Foreign Code

Leftwing Rebels at Margate Parley Show Unforeseen Strength in 2-1 Vote

Margate, England, May 28 (AP).—Britain's labor party, with leftwing "rebels" showing unforesen strength, voted 2 to 1 today in a test in support of Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's international policies.

Prior to the vote, Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison and Chancellor of the Exechequer Hugh Dalton indicated clearly at the party's annual conference that Britain intends to stand on her own feet economically and wants no second loan from the United States.

Morrison said he hoped for closer trade relations and "better understanding" with Russia.

Rejects Military Cuts

By a vote of 2,357,000 to 1,109,000, w ith each local unit balloting according to its membership strength, the conference rejected a resolution proposing a "review of the military commitments . . . in order that they may be considerably lowered."

Because military commitments back up Britain's foreign policy, most delegates felt they were voting to approve or disapprove of Bevin's program, which has been criticized by leftist Laborites as too close to the United States and too far away from Russia.

The skirmish was largely preliminary, however, to a full-dress foreign affairs debate scheduled by the conference for tomorrow, with Bevin himself taking part.

Morrison did not mention specifically a second American loan—a much talked-of possibility here—but said:

"We cannot live indefinitely on overdrafts without heading into an economic and financial crash."

Trade Talks Encouraging

He said preliminary talks with Russia had been encouraging, and that he hoped for a trade agreement that would promote better British-Russian understanding.

Both Morrison and Dalton appealed for increased industrial production to close the gap between imports and exports ,and thereby lessen what the leftists term "economic dependence" on the United States.

"We must not count on receiving any further overseas credits," Dalton told the conference. "I hope we take the view to strain every nerve and effort and stand on our own feet as soon as possible."

Later, speaking for the government on the military commitments resolution, Dalton said:

"No one in the government would not welcome substantial reduction in our armed forces if it were possible."

Interrupted by leftists, Dalton shouted that the return of troops from overseas duty would be determined by settlement of peace treaties wih axis satellites.

"Our troops will be withdrawn within 90 days after ratification of these peace treaties," he declared.

Pamphlet Indorsed

The resolution on the armed forces asked that overseas commitments cut "below the Government's target for March, 1948."

Prime Minister Attlee announced several weeks ago that Britain's armed forces, which numbered 1,427,000 on December 31, 1946, would be cut if possible to 1,087,000 by March, 1948, the end of the fiscal year.

In a statement to the conference, Dalton announced that the party executive group has indorsed the party pamphlet "cards on the table," an interpretation of Britain's foreign policy.

A group of extreme leftist Laborites, headed by Konni Zilliacus, was sharply critical of the pamphlet and asked whether it had the executive group's approval. The pamphlet defended Bevin's policy toward the United States and Russia.

eral bond issue, and only one—Clarendon No. 1—voted down a change in the present indirect method of picking the school board.

Arlington and Ballston, both heavily populated by apartment dwellers, turned out the heaviest totals of votes cast with 1893 and 1836 recorded respectively.

Voters came out nearly 3 to 1 for popular election of the board against appointment by the county board after going 9 to 5 in favor of changing the method of selection.

The present five-member school board ends its tenure next November when a new slate will be voted in at the polls. Today, the school board is picked by a three-member school electoral trustee board, which in turn is named by the county circuit court judge. The judge is appointed by the Virginia Legislature.

According to Virginia law, the two local school board members with the fewest votes next November will begin two-year terms; the three with the most votes will serve for four years each.

Ballot Boxes Stolen in Probe

vault had been blown open "with nitro-glycerine."

Press association dispatches from Kansas City said ballots from 32 to 34 city precincts, all of which had been checked by the grand jury, were taken from their boxes. The boxes were rifled after the vault in the offices of the Board of Election Commissioners in which they were locked had been pried open, the reports stated.

Work Feared Destroyed

Hugh C. Moore, foreman of the grand jury, was reported as saying the theft "looks like a brazen admission of guilt on the part of someone."

"It might mean the result of eight weeks' work by the jury is destroyed," he was quoted. "The evidence was carefully sifted and the indictments were built on what we believed to be strong cases.

"I hope this doesn't knock out the prosecution."

Clark's testimony before the Senate subcommittee was marked by several sharp clashes with Kem and Fergusen. After Kem had repeatedly pressed the point that the Justice Department could and should have brought action, Clark asked:

"Do you have any evidence of a conspiracy?"

"Plenty of it," said Kem.

"I wish you would furnish it to me," Clark retorted.

FBI Instructions Questioned

Kem then said evidence exists that all three specifications in the Federal Civil Rights statute had been violated: miscount of ballots, stuffing of boxes and denial of the right to vote.

The Missouri Senator cited a memorandum by Clark instructing the FBI to investigate the case which he said was "extremely cagey". The memorandum, he charged, called for a "limited investigation" instead of giving the FBI its head. Clark deiterated that the investigation was "preliminary" only and that it disclosed no evidence of conspiracy. He cited a 1936 case in Kansas City in which the Department of Justice secured 349 convictions on charges of conspiracy to deprive voters of ballots in a Federal election.

He said that case "tried the same points, the same city, the same frauds, perpetrated by the same organization," but it had been possible to prove conspiracy.

'Political Timing' Cited

The Attorney General grew caustic about what he called the "political timing" of the Kansas City grand jury.

"The first indictments," he said, "were handed down on the eve of the Republican convention in Kansas City. The second was when I went to Kansas City to speak. The new president comes as I appear before this committee."

Several times during yesterday's hearing the subcommittee recessed to study confidential FBI reports and FBI "methods" in executive session. Ferguson endeavored to have Clark release for publication the summary of the report, in which some members said they found "nothing startling."

"I can't agree that they were not 'startling,'" said Ferguson. "That depends on how you interpret that word."

He said the subcommittee probably would hear FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover before its investigation is ended. Clark was asked to return to continue his testimony next Thursday.

Teacher Pay Hike Approved

with master's degrees in corresponding jobs.

Committee approval of the bill was unanimous but Umstead reserved the right to renew his fight for master's pay for the 196 teachers when the Senate takes up the bill.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), subcommittee chairman in charge of the pay bill, led the fight against Umstead's plan. He said the main thing wanted by teachers was a "single salary" schedule—giving teachers in all school levels extra pay for the master's.

"The whole bill is based on that," said Cain. "You just can't have your cake and eat it, too."

In the test vote, Cain's position was backed by Senators C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), committee chairman; Arthur Capper (R., Kans.), Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.), Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) and James P. Kem (R., Mo.).

Siding with Umstead were Senators John S. Cooper (R., Ky.), Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.) and John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.).

Before approving the bill the committee also adopted Cain's suggestion that school attendance officers be allowed to take sick leave when there is sickness death or other emergency in the family. They can take it now only for their own illness.

Cain would not predict when the Senate would act. The House is slated to take up the pay bill today.

Alexandrian Hurt As Freight Train Hits Light Truck

A 28-year-old Alexandria man was injured slightly when a light pickup truck was struck by a Washington & Old Dominion Railroad freight train in Alexandria yesterday.

The injured man was Russell Fenton of 430 Hume ave., who was treated for lacerations of the head at Alexandria Hospital. The driver of the truck, James F. Long, 27, of 329-A Clifford ave., was uninjured.

Police said the crash apparently occurred when the truck driver failed to observe the oncoming train as he approached the intersection of the W. & O. D. tracks at Hume ave. The engineer on the train, W. H. Foxx of 1302 Lee hgwy., Arlington, told police he was traveling at only about 5 miles per hour and whistled several times before reaching the intersection.

Soil Payment Boost Beaten

Agricultural Relations.

By a 10-vote margin, 124 to 114, the House refused to upset an Appropriations Committee requirement that hereafter the meat industry pay for the cost of Federal meat inspections. The bill sets up a five-million-dollar revolving fund to continue inspecting under Government supervision, with those receiving the services to foot the bill. The Government now pays the entire cost.

Opponents of the change claimed the meat industry would pass the fees back to consumers in the form of higher prices or would pay cattle producers less to offset the charges.

Representative Hope (R., Kans.), chairman of the Agriculture Committee, planned to offer an amendment to restore another 148 million dollars taken from the department by Appropriations Committee action.

The 148 million dollars is what the department expected to receive from its 30 per cent share of import duties. Of this 100 million dollars would have been used for soil conservation payments. The Appropriations Committee directed that the entire amount go into the Treasury instead.

minutes later. He said that there was about a 10-foot break in the canal. Half an hour later the break had widened to 20 feet, however.

The land between the point of the break and the river is owned by the Federal Government.

Repair Crew Sent Out

Workmen were dispatched to repair the dike. No estimate was given as to how long it would take to repair the damage.

With the closing of the Brookmont Locks, the level of water in the canal fell to that of a severe drought. In some sections between the point of the break and Georgetown, there appeared to be only two or three feet of water within the dikes.

The canal, originally envisioned as an inland waterway serving the Nation's Capital, was outmoded before it was completed because of the rapid development steam locomotives and railroads. It was purchased by the Federal Government in 1938, and plans were launched to develop 22 miles, from junction of the canal with Rock Creek, to Seneca, Md., for recreational purposes.

The canal is 138 miles long, running from Georgetown to Cumberland, Md. It is believed that the choice of Washington as the Federal City was influenced by George Washington's belief that the canal could serve as a great inland waterway.

selves will handle the former; the latter will be in charge of the Board's general counsel.

3. Senate conferees accepted a House-sponsored plan to forbid "featherbedding" practices—those which force an employer to hire or pay for more employes than he can put to work. The mechanism agreed on makes it an unfair labor practice for employes to strike to force employers to pay workers for work not performed.

Three Major Sections

The only issue still in dispute between the House and Senate conferees relates to a definition of agricultural laborers who are to be excluded from the benefits of the Wagner act.

The House wants to leave out some 250,000-300,000 employes in food processing and packing sheds on or near farms.

As the history-making bill now stands, it is divided into three major "titles" or sections. One provides machinery for use in cases of "national emergency" strikes, takes the Conciliation Service out of the Department of Labor and reconstitutes it as a separate agency, with a prescribed form of procedure. Another provides for suits against unions. The third, and most comprehensive, is a deep-cutting revision of the Wagner Act, never amended since its passage on July 5, 1935.

There are two other titles, one setting forth some definitions, the other creating a congressional committee for a several months' study of labor relations.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 28 (U.P.).—Street fighting developed today outside the House of Assembly when whip-welding bodyguards of William Alexander Bustamante, leader of the Goevrnment's Labor Party, clashed with a large group of unemployed workers as Bustamante left the building.

Order was restored finally with the arrival of police. There were no reports of casualties. The workers had gathered outside the House to demonstrate against Bustamante, who evidently had been forewarned.

involving old-age retirement and social security benefits."

Leonard said negotiations with Ford would resume Monday. The union threatened a strike vote earlier this week because of difficulties in contract discussions.

The UAW-CIO originally demanded a 23½-cent an hour increase as well as the retirement plan.

The terms outlined by Ford today were the same as those accepted earlier by General Motors and Chrysler employes.

The company's increase to salary workers specificially excluded for the time being the 3800 members of the Foreman's Association of America (Ind.) who have been on strike since May 21.

Vice President John S. Bugas, in a letter to the United Auto Workers, said the over-all increases would cost the firm 43 million dollars annually and added:

"This added cost to the production of cars and trucks at this critical time must somehow be compensated for by high productivity, continued freedom from unauthorized work stoppages and sustained high production if we are to escape the unsound position of simply passing the bill on to our customers."

Last January the company announced price reductions on its various models ranging from $18 to $55.

Sales Tax Foes to File Petitions Today As First Step Toward Outlawing New Levy

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—A State-wide organization of businessmuen and others opposed to Maryland's new 2 per cent sales tax plans to set in motion tomorrow a legal test by which they hope to have it outlawed.

Samuel J. Fisher, attorney for the Maryland Economic Council, said today he would present to Secretary of State John B. Funk at Annapolis a sheaf of petitions asking for a referendum on the sales levy.

Robert I. Black of norbeck, president of the council, said the petitions already have 16,000 notarized signatures.

Funk, a close adviser of Governor Lane, has not announced what action he will take on the petitions.

A member of the Lane administration said the secretary's first move probably will be to ask the attorney general for a formal opinion on whether he should entertain the petitions.

Attorney General Hall Hammond already has announced what his opinion will be. He reported to Governor Lane two days ago that the sales tax measure is not subject to a popular vote.

The section of the Maryland constitution which provides for a referendum on acts of the Legislature exempts those which deal with appropriations and "maintaining the government." Hammond said in his opinion the sales tax is necessary to maintaining the government.

If Funk refuses to recognize the referendum petitions, the economic council has at least two moves open to it.

1. Go into a Circuit Court and ask for a writ enjoining the State comptroller from collecting the tax starting July 1.

2. Go into a Circuit Court and seek of writ of mandamus requiring the the question be put on the ballot at the next State?wide election —in 1948.

Black has promised a fight to the Court of Appeals if a lower court rules against the economic council.

Attorney General Hammond said today the State would go ahead and collect it if the council succeeds in having the question put on the 1948 ballot.

The economic council, made up of chambers of commerce, business associations and others, has been rounding up notarized signatures on its anti-sales tax petitions since soon after the General Assembly adopted it at Governor Lane's behest in March.

Precise Prisoner

Hagerstown, Md., May 28 (AP). Kenneth Shirley, 45, came up in Circuit Court on a charge of habitual drunkeness today and insisted that everything be precise.

"You've been arrested 139 times," said State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram.

"It's 140 times," said Shirley.

Hospital Drive Mapped

Frederick, Md., May 28.—Plans to raise $600,000 for expansion of facilities of Frederick Memorial Hospital were approved at a dinner meeting here last night attended by 250 representative citizens of Frederick City and County.

Members of the hospital medical staff explained that present facilities are overtaxed and that a new three-story addition to the building will provide from 50 to 55 additional beds in addition to larger laboratories, operating rooms and X-ray department. Dr. Edward P. Thomas announced that the hospital medical staff aimed to subscribe a minimum of $65,000 to the campaign.

Grain Progress Good

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Barley, rye and wheat are heading on most of Maryland's farmlands, and corn is up one to six inches in southern counties, the United States Weather Bureaus' crop reporting service said today.

Grain is "generally good to excellent," except on the Delmarva Peninsula, where rye, wheat and barley are reported damaged "50 to 70 per cent" by dry soil.

Truck crops in the western counties in general are approximately two weeks late, the service said.

The strawberry crop in southern counties is reported abundant, and tobacco beds "have improved to excellent, except that there has been some damage by blue mold," the Weather Bureau said.

On the Eastern Shore the service said, "Indications are that peaches were pretty well killed by the frost, but other fruits are developing, with prospects for a fair to good crop."

College Head Named

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—The State Board of Education announced today the appointment of Dr. Earl T. Hawkins, director of instruction, as president of the Towson State Teachers College. Dr. Hawkins will succeed Dr. M. Theresa Wiedefeld, whose retirement becomes effective August 31.

Youth Held in Attack

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Police said today they are holding a 20-year-old youth in their investigation of an attack on a 15-year-old girl in a hallway at her home last night.

Police Capt. Julian Forrest said the girl told him she was alone in an upstairs apartment when the door buzzer rang. When she went downstairs to answer it, a Negro shoved her back into the hallway, beat her with a stick and choked her.

She was treated at Union Memorial Hospital for a cut on the cheek and bruises on her forehead and throat. Doctors reported there was "evidence of criminal assault."

New Librarian Sworn In

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Mrs. Gertrude E. Horigan of Baltimore was sworn in today by Governor Lane as State librarian at the Chief Executive's offices in Baltimore. She succeeds the late Robert Leach, jr., of Baltimore, and will serve a four-year term.

Mrs. Horigan was a member of the Baltimore City Jail Board 12 years, and was reappointed by Governor O'Conor last year for a second six-year term on the State Board of Corrections.

Woman Robbed at Beach

Annapolis, Md., May 28 (AP).—Police were looking today for two men reported by Mrs. Morris Radoff, wife of the State Archivist, to have stolen her purse and a lunch bag at the Persimmon Point Beach, a half-mile from her home, yesterday.

County Police Sergt. Brooke Meade said Mrs. Radoff was approached by the men while her niece and nephew, Elizabeth Clark, 10, and Julian Clark, 8, were in the water. They told her to keep quiet, seized the articles and fled in an automobile, Mrs. Radoff told police.

The purse contained about $3 in cash, a pair of reading glasses and a compact.

Union Pact Signed

Hagerstown, Md., May 28 (AP). The M. P. Moller Co., organ manufacturers, ad Federal Union Local, No. 211108 (AFL) have signed a contract granting an "across the board" wage increase of 7 cents hourly for 250 employes, Lester Lushbaugh announced.

Lushbaugh, business agent for the union, said the past also includes a union shop clause, dues check-off, seniority provisions and new vacation allowances.

German Bride Arrives

Frederick, Md., May 28.—Mrs. Berta Benz Speaks, Frederick's first German war bride, is gradually getting accustomed to life in this city, which is so different from her home in war-torn Europe. Mrs. Speaks and her former GI husband, Raymond, arrived here last weekend by plane from Germany where the local man worked as a civilian for the War Department after receiving his military discharge.

Everything here is very strange to the young wife, particularly the modern kitchen gadgets. She is gradually getting accustomed to a washing machine.

Mrs. Speaks, who learned the language from her husband, speaks English very well.

2 Treated for Tick Fever

Annapolis, Md., May 28 (AP).—Two Anne Arundel County women are under treatment for tick fever at University Hospital in Baltimore, County Medical Officer Dr. William J. French reported today.

Another victim, a 10-month-child in the Jessups area, has recovered, he added. All three cases were reported 10 days ago.

Three deaths resulted from 13 cases in the county last year, Dr. French said, pointing out that June is the most dangerous month for contraction of the fever.

Precedent in 1907

Annapolis, Md., May 28 (AP).—Students of Naval Academy lore, still somewhat taken aback by a midshipman's choice of his sister as June Week color girl, dug into the archives today and discovered this is not the first time the glory was kept in the family.

Midshipman Thaddeus Thomson, commander of the brigade's winning company in 1907, passed up all his faminine acquaintances and chose his sister Eleanor, to reign over the last dress parade of the year and present his company with the famous colors.

It didn't happen again until yesterday when Midshipman William E. Nylen, skipper of the Twenty-third Company, named his sister, Helen Gayle of Burbank, Calif., as color girl for the festivities next week.

Helen and their mother, Mrs. Gustaf E. Nylen, are due to arrive in Annapolis Friday. They will remain until after brother Bill's graduation June 6.

Police to Impound Md. Cars Without New 1947 Plate

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—The order went out to Maryland police tonight to impound all automobiles bearing 1947 license plates after midnight because the tags became extinct at that hour.

Officers explained the machines seized will be held until owners obtain and affix the new plates. The owners also will be summoned to traffic court.

The long waiting lines of tag applicants of other years did not materialize during the day as the deadline for the old licenses drew near.

The only time the line extended into the street at the motor vehicle commissioner's office here was during the noon hour, when cashiers i nthe office went to lunch in shifts.

The reason for the lack of congestion was because the deadline for plates was extended twice—vrst, to await clarification of the new tax law as it affects automobiles, and secondly because the new plates were not ready.

Discrepancies Charged in Slaying Trial

Boykin Branham, 53, former night watchman, went on trial for his life yesterday in Alexandria Corporation Court, Alexandria, Va., charged with the drinking-bout slaying of a divorcee.

The defendant has consistently maintained, police say, that he has no recollections of the circumstances which preceded the finding of his companion, her throat slashed and her blood splattered about the walls of her employer's bedroom, on March 4.

Victim was Mrs. Reba McLane, 43, housekeeper for Henry Jeffries, 3306 Mount Vernon ave., Alexandria, an employe of the Fruit Growers Express Co.

Chief witness for the prosecution at the start of yesterday's trial was Lieut. Russell A. Hawes, chief of Alexandria detectives. Hawes testified to "discrepancies" and "conflicting stories" of Branham in explanation of bloodstains on his penknife, which was found in his pocket after his arrest.

Other witnesses told of seeing the pair earlier on the day of the tragedy and described both as "apparently intoxicated." A taxi driver told of delivering a bottle of liquor to the defendant the same day.

Branham, onetime Alexandria city employe, pleaded not guilty to the murder charge when he was indicted 48 hours after his arrest. He has been in Alexandria jail since the slaying in default of $10,000 bond.

6 Boys Sentenced In Baseball Bat Slaying of Guard

Powhatan, Va., May 28 (AP).—Judge J. G. Jefferson, jr., yesterday sentenced Garwood Trenor of Roanoke to 10 years in prison on his plea of guilty to second degree murder charges in the death of a guard at Virginia Industrial School for Boys and gave five other former inmates of the institution five years each for pleas of guilty on charges of accessory before the fact.

The guard, 22-year-old Clarence E. Hubbard, died last May 25 from a blow, which Trenor was charged with giving him, with a baseball bat. Thirty boys at the corrective school had been ushered from an athletic field to a basement room when one of the boys pretended to faint. Hubbard was struck as he leaned over the boy to assist him. An escape attempt by the boys was foiled.

The six sentenced were indicted July 21 after an investigation into the affair.

The five receiving five-year sentences were Samuel Winston of Richmond, whose entire sentence was suspended during his good behavior; Freddie Caves of Roanoke, Charles Wilburn of Alexandria, Richard Harlow of Bristol and Robert Rawson of Worcester, Mass. The judge suspended two years of the sentences given the latter four.

Old Barracks Carved Into 170 Homes

Portsmouth, Va., May 28 (AP).—Because a contractor had the imagination to chop barracks into bungalows, 170 Negro war veterans will move into new houses this summer—and the contractor stands to take down a six-digit profit on the deal.

More than 100 of the tiny, four-room units have been sold to former GI's and 50 of them will be occupied by June 1. Selling for $3400, each house has two bedrooms, a combination living-dining room, kitchen and bath.

George T. McLean, industrialist, contractor and sportsman, says less than a carload of waste materials was left over after the barracks were carved up and the bungalows placed.

Work Done in 35 Days

It was a quick job. Dismantling of 10 barracks buildings at the Norfolk naval shipyard at Portsmouth, occupied by naval enlisted personnel during the war, was begun February 3. The site was cleared 35 days later.

It was the first operation of its kind in the country and it aroused the enthusiasm of National Housing Expediter Frank R. Creedon, who exclaimed: "It outdoes the prefabricating people," according to Frederick A. Fay, technical director of the Portsmouth Redevelopment and Housing Authority. Fay served as architect-engineer on the project.

When the Navy announced it would sell the 10 two-story barracks buildings, McLean submitted high bid of $265 for each building. He had planned to tear them down for sale as building material, but suddenly he conceived the notion of slicing the barracks into little houses.

When George conceives a notion he doesn't just sit there. He moves. This time, he moved to the site of Armistead Trailers, a mile and a half from the shipyard barracks. Some 300 trailers remained there, though the project had been terminated by the Federal Public Housing Administration.

McLean talked the War Assets Administration people into scheduling a quick sale of the trailers. He bought the land from its several owners. He laid cinder-block foundations for the bungalows. He built a mile-long dirt road from the trailer site to a point near the shipyard. He bought three big 20-ton cranes, war surplus babies.

And then he sliced barracks into bungalows by cutting each story into 20 by 28 foot sections. As each section was sliced, one of the big cranes lifted the 12-ton unit and deposited it upon a low-bed trailer, on which it was hauled over the newly constructed dirt road to the housing site, designated North Truxtun.

The 10 barracks, for which McLean paid $2650, have yielded 170 bungalows. The purchase is carried on a 20-year guaranteed FHA mortgage. "Closing costs" of $100 are required and the monthly payments are $26.53, including principal, interest and taxes.

The housing site covers about 70 acres.

Domestic Whisky Removed From Rationing After June 2; Wine Prices Sharply Cut

Richmond, Va., May 28 (AP).—The State's Liquor Control Board today announced that its "bottle per day per customer" policy, which now applies to bottled in bond whiskies, other straight whiskies and imported whiskies would after June 2 apply only to Canadian, Scotch and Irish whiskys.

The relaxation in liquor rationing was accompanied by a new price list showing major reductions in the price of 58 wines and smaller reductions in the prices of 14 spirits. Prices were increased on 14 spirits.

Twenty new items are being added to the stocks available in stores.

The board said removal of the bottle per day per customer system does not mean that sufficient supplies are on hand to meet all demands. The State's quotas of domestic whisky have been increased by distillers, but the board feels that high prices will remain as a deterrent to overbuying by the public.

The board has a heavy stock of wines, but said no loss would be suffered under the sharp price cuts announced. Wholesale prices which jumped when OPA ceilings were cast off have been lowered again as a result of a bumper crop of grapes and because the increasing supply of beer and whisky have had an effect.

Decreases in spirits range from 5 to 35 cents per fifth on some spirit blends. Price cuts on wine range as high as 70 cents per fifth on some burgundies and 65 cents on champagnes, with lesser cuts on the less expensive brands.

Grass Fields Inspected

Blacksburg, Va., May 28.—Almost a hundred agriculturists from seven States and the District of Columbia attended the first annual orchard grass field day sponsored by agronomists in the Virginia Experiment Station and the Solvay Process Co. of Hopewell, Va. Experimental orchard grass seed and hay-producing plots in Fauquier and Culpeper Counties were visited on Monday.

Quantico Program Set

..Fredericksburg, Va., May 28.—Maj. Gen. C. B. Cates, commandant of the Quantico Marine Base, will deliver the principal address at the annual Memorial Day exercises at the Buck Keyes Post, American Legion, at Quantico Friday at 10 a. m. in the post theater. General Cates will be introduced by Col. E. A. Pollock, chief of staff. Following the exercises a wreath will be laid upon the grave of Buck Keyes, World War I soldier, for whom the post is named.

Druggists End Parley

Roanoke, Va., May 28 (AP).—The 600 delegates to the sixty-sixth annual convention of Virginia Pharmaceutical Association had departed for their homes today after registering an appeal for legislation to improve hospital pharmacy controls and noting they favored the excise tax on cosmetics being repealed.

The druggists also passed a resolution expressing opposition to a sales tax in Virginia and requesting manufacturers to furnish pharmacists with information on effects and dosages of new drugs before the preparations are put on the market. Manufacturers likewise were asked to clarify labels on drug bottles.

The association named R. R. Rooke of Richmond, president; T. W. Bradley of Bristol, Charles Green of Bedford and D. D. Gray, jr., of Norfolk, vice presidents, and A. L. I. Winne, Richmond, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Fredericksburg Program

Fredericksburg, Va., May 28.—Chaplain E. J. Hemphill, of the Marine Corps Air Station, at Quantico, has accepted an invitation to be the principal speaker at Memorial Day exercises here Friday. The exercises will open at the Confederate Cemetery at 4:30 p. m. and will be followed by others at the National Cemetery.

Five Va. Cadets in Class

West Point, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—The June 3 graduation class of the United States Military Academy will include five cadets closely identified with the State of Virginia —four of whom have parents residing in the Commonwealth and the fifth receiving his earlier education in Virginia.

The five are Harry P. Ball, son of Mrs. Robert M. Bathurst, Fort Monroe; Robert F. McCord, son of Col. and Mrs. Walter D. McCord, Alexandria; Kenneth H. Farrier, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. H. Farrier, Newport; John F. Hoover, son of Mrs. Ruby B. Hoover, Timberville, and Charles C. Stewart, son of Col. and Mrs. M. N. Stewart, now on foreign duty.

Will Acquire Truck Firm

Richmond, Va., May 27 (AP).—The State corporation commission today granted the Wilson Trucking Co. of Waynesboro authority to buy all certificates of public convenience and necessity previously assigned to Richmond-Harrisonburg Freight Lines of Harrisonburg.

An SCC spokesman said the sale of the certificates—representing the company's rights to operate a commercial motor freight business over specified routes—was the first step in an outright purchase of all assets and physical properties of the Richmond-Harrisonburg line, one of the State's largest.

Fete Tickets on Sale

Charlottesville, Va., May 28.—Ticket offices for the first annual Virginia Music Festival, which starts June 13, have been opened in Charlottesville and at the University of Virginia. Additional offices will be opened in Richmond, Lynchburg, Roanoke and other Virginia cities. Mail orders are also being accepted, festival officials announced today.

Miss Mona Paulee, Metropolitan Opera Company mezzo-soprano, will sing with the University Glee Club and the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, D. C., in the opening concert at the Scott Stadium here.

New Phone Manager

Winchester, Va., May 28.—Charles P. Marks has been appointed manager of the Winchester office of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., C. A. Sydnor, jr., district manager, announced today. Woods, who is a native of Chesterfield County and a graduate of Randolph-Macon College, succeeds Stephen R. Sammis, who has been appointed commercial supervisor in Richmond.

Annex Court Set Up

Richmond, Va., (AP).—The Supreme Court of Appeals today set up a three-judge court to sit in the Circuit Court of Augusta County June 16 to begin hearing the annexation proceedings brought by the Town of Waynesboro against the county.

Judge Floridus S. Crosby will be joined by Judge John S. Draper of the Twenty-first Circuit and Judge Lemuel F. Smith of the Eighth Circuit, in determining the suit.

$38,291 Raised in Drive

Waynesboro, Va., May 28.—Workers in the Main Street Methodist Church building fund campaign last night reported cash and pledges totaling $38,291 in the drive for an $85,000 fund with which to construct an educational building for Sunday school purposes. Solicitation is continuing this week with additional progress reports due Friday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Loss Exceeds $400,000 in Grafton Fire

Grafton, W. Va., May 28 (AP).—A theater and six stores in one of Grafton's principal main street business blocks burned out today in a spectacular blaze which firemen battled three hours to bring under control.

At one time flames leaped 150 feet into the air and threatened to spread throughout the business district.

A survey of property owners indicated damage would be more than $400,000. No one was injured.

Firemen estimated when they arrived at 3:55 a. m. that the fire had been burning at least an hour in the Grafton Theater, which occupied most of the four-story Brinkman block.

Between 4 and 4:15 there was an explosion which shattered all the new glass fronts recently put on the stores occupying the block and blew out part of the theater wall. Flames belched into the sky, attracting crowds.

From the theater, the fire spread east along Main st. and destroyed Bonafede's grocery, the Loar jewelry store, a Western Auto appliance store, a Sears Roebuck catalogue order store and the C. B. Miller shoe store.

It also made some headway into another building adjoining the Brinkman block on the west and heavily damaged the Turner flower shop in that structure.

When the west wall of the theater toppled over, a shower of bricks was dumped across a small alley onto the Archdeacon Building, doing considerable damage to it and the clothing store it houses.

Firemen from Philipi, Newburg, Bridgeport and Clarksburg joined the Grafton volunteers in fighting the blaze.

At 7 a. m. the spread of the flames had been checked. The gutted buildings continued to smoulder for hours.

There was no immediate indication how the fire started or what caused the explosion.

Mock Mob Forced Slaying Admission Va. Court Is Told

Wise, Va., May 28 (AP).—The defense implied today over the denial of a deputy sheriff that efforts to make Willie Lyle admit the slash-murder of Mrs. Hester Tiller included the formation of a mock mob on the courthouse green outside the Wise County jail.

Attorney Fred B. Greear, defending the 23-year-old Kingsport, Tenn., Negro mechanic in Wise Circuit Court questioned Deputy Frank Linkhous on this point and —when the prosecution objected to the line of questioning—said he would introduce evidence to show that Lyle was terrorized.

"Weren't a bunch of men put around the jail and Lyle taken to a window to see them and told they were getting ready to lynch him?" Greear asked.

Linkous quickly answered "no" but not before Commonwealth's Attorney John Roberts interposed strong objections to such questioning unless there was evidence behind the inference.

Greear rejoined that he would introduce such evidence and Judge George Morton permitted the question and the reply to remain in the record.

Dr. Henkel Is Dead at 86 In Winchester

Winchester, Va., May 28.—The Winchester area lost the last of its old-time family doctors yesterday with the death of 86-year-old Dr. Alfred D. Henkel after an illness of six months.

Dr. Henkel, a member of a pioneer Shenandoah Valley family, took up the practice of medicine here more than 60 years ago, taking part in the transition from "horse and buggy" days to those of the modern motor vehicle.

He took an active part in affairs of Grace Lutheran Church as a member of its council, and was on the Winchester School Board for many years.

He is survived by a daughter, Virginia M. Henkel; a son, Alfred S. Henkel, both of Winchester, and five sisters.

Winchester, Va., May 28.—Funeral services for Francis Baldwin Crawford, 83, member of a prominent Frederick County family who died yesterday, will be held Thursday at 11 a. m. at Loudoun Street Presbyterian Church here. Crawford had been a ruling elder of the church for many years.

A graduate of Shenandoah Valley Academy and Washington and Lee University, Crawford taught at McDonough School for Boys, Owings Mill, Md., for 26 years and later at Shenandoah Valley Academy.

In recent years he had done geneological research here.

Survivors include one daughter, Mrs. Raleigh Moore Engle, wife of the pastor of the Hampton (Va.) Presbyterian Church, and two grandchildren.

Md. Men Seek Lost Taxes On War Plants

A House bill which would reimburse local government units for taxes lost when the federal government took over a plant and subleased it yesterday claimed the backing of two Maryland Congressmen and the president of the Baltimore County board of commissioners.

A $50,000 annual tax loss has been suffered over the Fairchild Corp. Airplane Plant in 1943, Representative Beall (R.) declared.

He said the installation is now tax exempt because it is under government ownership.

In Baltimore County, a similar situation prevailed in the case of the Glenn Martin plant which has been tax free since theGovernment acquired the plant and leased most of it back to the company, Representative Hugh A. Meade (D.) said.

Christian Kahl, head of the Baltimore County commissioners, explained that such services as schools and police protection to workers at the plant, which once employed 30,000, cost the local government $125 yearly.

"The taxpayers of Baltimore County are now paying to keep the Glenn Martin plant in competition," Kahl said.

Jury Sets Land Value

Annapolis, Md., May 28 (AP).—A value of $62,004.20 was set yesterday by an Anne Arundel County jury on a 11.5-acre tract at Harmans sought by Baltimore City for its Friendship Church Municipal Airport site.

Estimates of the value of the tract ranged from $22,000 to $101,347.50 during a hearing, one in a series in which the city is acquiring land for the project in Upper Anne Arundel County.

Dr. Fenton Dies; W. Va. Professor Of Pathology

Morgantown, W. Va., May 28 (AP).—Dr. C. C. Fenton, eminent pathologist who had served as professor of pathology at West Virginia University's school of medicine for 21 years, died last night of a heart attack.

Dr. Fenton, who would have been 55 years old in July, suffered an attack in March, 1946, and had to relinquish his duties. He returned to the classroom in September.

Native of New York City, Dr. Fenton received his AB degree at Columbia University in 1915. Coming to West Virginia as acting professor of pathology, he obtained his bachelor's and master's degrees here, then went to Cornell University where he received his medical degree in 1925.

The following year, he returned to Morgantown as professor of pathology and had occupied that post since.

Cuban Group Seeks Outlawing of Reds

Havana, Cuba, May 27 (U.P.).—The national executive board of the Revolutionary Fight Front today announced the start of a nation-wide canvass for 10,000 signatures to a petition calling for outlawing of the Communist Party.

In its manifesto the board said it was necessary to decide now "who is for Russia and who is for the United States."

Probers Call Film Bigwigs

flagrantly pro-Communist Hollywood films.

The report did not amplify its assertion concerning "White House pressure" or disclose under whose administration the White House influence was exerted.

The charge was made in a report submitted by a subcommittee which recently completed a first hand investigation into allegations of Communist influence in the motion picture industry.

A committee disclosed that the reference to "White House pressure" referred to successful efforts to have Warner Brothers film Joseph E. Davies' "Mission to Moscow" and to the testimony of Robert Taylor that his naval service was delayed so he could make "Song of Russia."

Screen Guild Accused

The subcommittee report said the Screen Writers Guild, to which virtually all Hollywood scenarists belong, is "according to competent witnesses, under complete domination of the Communist Party."

The committee charged that redminded writers, some of them members of the Communist Party, were accused of employing subtle techniques to glorify the Soviet Union and degrade democracy and American institutions.

The National Labor Relations Board was accused of having given aid to Communists in their efforts to infiltrate the motion pitcure unions.

Asserting that until recently studio heads have made no concerted effort to ban Communists from the industry, the committee said it has a complete list of all Communist propaganda pictures produced in Hollywood since 1939.

The report detailed the questioning of Hans Eisler, film music composed and brother of Gerhardt Eisler, alleged No. 1 Communist in America who faces trial for contempt of Congress.

The report termed Eisler's answers "evasive" and in many cases "contrary to documentary evidence."

Adm. Denfeld Plans Visit [illegible]

Admiral Louis Denfeld, Pacific Fleet commander in chief, has scheduled a visit to Australia during which he is expected to confer with commonwealth officials on Pacific defense problems.

Denfeld is to accompany Ambassador Robert Butler, who is due to leave his St. Paul, Minn., home by plane Sunday after a month's stay in the United States.

The Navy yesterday described Denfeld's visit as "social," in connection with current courtesy calls in Australian ports of an American naval detachment which includes the aircraft carrier Shangri-La.

If Your Mood's Right, You'll Like 'Barbaee' Despite Heavy Hokum

By Richard L. Coe

EVER SO OFTEN a picture comes along which you know isn't good but you like it anyway. Such a one, to us, is the Capitol's new "High Barbaree."

This is an oversentimental, coincidence-loaded, sugary piece of hokum which we enjoyed immensely. Our critical colleagues probably will tear it apart and even to these frankly prejudiced eyes some of "High Barbaree's" fandangoes are too thick. The fact remains we liked its genial, nostalgic mood.

Van Johnson

It is a story of childhood and how adults look back on its fuzzy glow with a kind of wonder. Van Johnson plays a Navy flier, downed in the South Pacific. He keeps his sole remaining colleague awake by telling him of his Iowa boyhood, of his girl and of a bottle-attached sea-faring uncle who used to tell him tales of an island he once imagined. Of course, in the South Pacific. A place the uncle called "High Barbaree."

Yes, they are drifting toward the exact position of the island which the pilot had pin-pointed on a map when a boy. When they reach that point help will come, says the pilot. Of course it does. And in the form of his uncle and the childhood pal, now a Navy nurse.

Pretty improbable, isn't it? Just the sort of candy you've been fed before.

But the mood and the idea caught your impressionable reporter.

A Purely Personal Reaction!

As Johnson told the story and we flashed back in time to watch him as a boy (capitally played by Claude Jarman, jr.), we became part of the adventure. With his girl-pal (the childhood of June Allyson is acted my Joan Wells) he climbs to the forbidding top of a high water tower. The long ladder seemed endless, the drop dizzying. The boy wonders at the length of the road his doctor-father is driving and at the sound of a piano note his mother is playing. He goes canoeing on a river, imagining all sorts of adventures (shades of Mark Twain). He joins a circus as a trick cyclist.

All those things struck us personally. We remembered climbing a cathedral apse at the same age, stealing a boat for just such a trip on a Jersey river and trying—alas unsuccessfully—to link up with a circus in Vermont. And we remembered, too, during the war, lying in a truck top in the Western Desert sharing just such memories with fellows whose names we've now all but forgotten. So you see, it's a mood picture, in its way, and some of those childhood scenes may strike the same note with you.

The Johnson role is overwritten, to be sure. To heighten the conflict between his boyhood desire to become a doctor and his manhood aim to get at quick riches he is given too quick worldly success. He's an aircraft company vice president with all the plush surroundings Hollywood associates with Success. He's engaged to the boss' daughter, an unmistakably slick snob. All this is false and completely out of the key of those sentimental flashbacks. The film is too long and many of the characters are shamefully stock figures.

Van's Likable

Johnson is likable and straightforward as the boy, a performance it would be easy to mock, but which is essentially right for the role. The Jarman lad is easy and natural as his younger self. June Allyson is carefully appealing as the nurse and Thomas Mitchell is simply himself as the convivial, talkative uncle.

No, everyone won't like "High Barbaree," but there are probably some more sentimental souls who'll find it pleasantly moody. If you fancy yourself as a sophisticate, don't be caught dead at it. But if there are chinks in your armor, you, too, might be mesmerized.

The Capitol's new stage show is headlined by the chattering comic, George Givot, who fancies himself as a Greek Ambassador. Betty Reilly, who calls herself "The Irish Senorita," Lloyd and Willis, dancers, and the Chesterfields, acrobats from "This Is the Army," complete the bill.

His first bitter experience in diplomatic friend-making occurred soon after he arrived to take his post. A man presented a letter from one of Bay's acquaintances in America. He was personable, spoke English well and was quite entertaining. The next day, when a reception was held for Ambassador Bay, he asked this man to come . . . When the reception was over, Bay discussed it with an aide who had been in Norway a long time. "Were there any collaborationists at the reception?" Bay asked. His aide nodded, and said: "Only one. "I'm about to look over some new pitchers for my Cleveland ball club," said Hope. "Maybe I should audition them for open pores."*

FINANCE DEPT.: Hope was discussing his current independent productions. He borrowed the money from the bank for these productions, and put up blocks of stock as security. When the value of these securities dropped with the market slump, Hope had to put up additional stocks . . . "It's great to be an independent producer," sighed Hope. "I had to work 20 years to be in a position whereby I owe two and a half million dollars."

MOVIES: Ben Hecht tells of the day he and Gene Fowler sat in a Hollywood restaurant with John Barrymore, and listened to Barrymore describing his sentiments toward certain ladies. Two women in the adjoining booth were outraged by Barrymore's language, and their six male escorts asked the star to mind his tongue. When Barrymore ignored them, and repeated the colorful descriptives, the six husky men rushed toward him. Hecht and Fowler intervened by constituting themselves a wall of flesh between the enraged sextet and Barrymore—who sat majestically observing the melee and then said to his two embattled friends: "Let the peasants approach and present their petition."

It was here that she first started to act, on the Bob Hope radio show and it was in New York that her film career was launched . . . She was born in Macon, Ga., and when she decided to leave home for the Big City her father gave her a railroad ticket and $300. She spent $272 for clothes on her first day. That night she met a man who took her to dinner and to the race track the next afternoon. She bet her last $20 on a 60 to 1 shot in the first race. When the horse won, Miss Wilder wired her father that it would be a long time before Macon would see her again.

Austrian Danger

There is no doubt, as Gen. Mark W. Clark says, that Russia, in spite of her pledges to reestablish Austria as an independent state, is trying to squeeze the very sustenance out of Austria. By a misconstruction of the Potsdam formula allowing for the collection of "German assets" outside Germany, Moscow has laid its hand on all manner of Austria's resources. As General Clark said, farm products and livestock have been seized, and little food is allowed to leave the Russian zone, which is Austria's granary. The Austrian government is reaching the limits of its endurance. Till recently the young Foreign Minister, Dr. Karl Gruber, has been saying "No" to Russia's incessant demands. But the failure in Moscow to agree upon a peace treaty with Austria is said to be undermining even his iron negative. As he sees his people in slow process of starving to death, he is getting, understandably, less adamant, sharing to some extent in the prevailing hopelessness of the Austrian people.

The man who held up the Austrian government's hand in these encounters with the pillaging Russians was Mark Clark. No military administrator has done better than Clark. His courage, his adroitness in handling the Russians, his unsleeping watchfulness—all these qualities have saved Austria from being completely gutted. Now he has been withdrawn. In his place we have sent Gen. Geoffrey Keys, a first-class soldier, but a man devoid of either the administrative experience or the diplomatic finesse required for this all-important assignment. It has been General Eisenhower's hope that Secretary Marshall will do something that Secretary Byrnes never got around to do, namely, relieve the Army of these administrative responsibilities. Action should be taken without delay in Vienna.

There are State Department men in Europe who, if they could not measure up to General Clark, are quite capable of matching wits with the Russians. One is John C. Wiley, our Ambassador at Lisbon, who did a heroic service when Hitler took over Austria, working night and day to ease the way out of Austria for the people who were in danger from Hitler. Mr. John Ehrhardt, General Keys' political adviser, is likewise a first-class man, but at present he is ill, and his indisposition is making a bad situation weaker. What General Clark said, it may be hoped, will spotlight our administrative vacuum in Austria before the government crumbles away.

Civilian Intelligence

If the Central Intelligence Agency is to serve as a truly national fountain of information, its director must be a civilian in fact as well as in name. More than the tradition of civilian control is involved here. As we have noted previously, continuity in office is imperative in so vital a function as intelligence. A requirement that the director of central intelligence either be appointed direct from civilian life or relinquish all military status is the only means by which an end can be assured to the trading back and forth between the Army and Navy that to date has hampered stable operation. Even more important, however, is the fact that honest-to-goodness civilian direction is the only way to avoid the formation of top-level military cliques which would inevitably dominate intelligence evaluation and thus mean a warped intelligence picture.

We hope that the Senate Armed Services Committee will explore all these implications thoroughly as it considers this significant portion of the armed forces merger. To our mind, the neglect to specify civilian direction of intelligence operations is one of the principal weaknesses of the present merger bill. We do not go all the way with Senator Robertson in his substitute bill which would shear the Central Intelligence Agency of its directive powers in addition to stipulating that the director be a civilian. The agency must have the power to survey the entire field of intelligence operations and to take action to fill the gaps. If the agency is emasculated of this function, then the evil of military dominance remains. But certainly the specification as to a civilian director is a must.

Beyond this, in our opinion, the committee should probe methods of assuring a fair proportion of civilians in key intelligence positions. A civilian director alone would be meaningless if the jobs under him were filled entirely by military men. So far there has been a disconcerting tendency to use subordinate positions in the present Central Intelligence Group as receptacles for outworn Army G-2s and Navy captains who, through their ability to stifle action, pose as much of a threat to efficiency as would a military director.

Teachers' Salary Act

The unanimity with which the House and Senate District Committees approved the new teacher pay bill is immensely heartening. And the speed with which both acted augurs well for enactment of this vital legislation before the current session of Congress comes to a close. We cannot help feeling, nevertheless, that it would have been wise to delay committee action at least long enough to let the teachers themselves be heard. The new bill differs materially from the proposals originally submitted by the Board of Education, in the framing of which the teachers had full opportunity to express their views. Denied any opportunity to participate in the drafting of the present bill, the teachers are now understandably confused and apprehensive about some of its implications.

We think this especially unfortunate because the primary purpose of the measure is to give a lift to teacher morale. Dr. Corning no doubt allayed some of their misgivings by his testimony yesterday before the Senate District Committee. But it would have been preferable, we think, to let the teachers bring these misgivings into the open and present their own arguments for certain changes they deem desirable. They are not children, wards or incompetents but articulate members of a profession the essential dignity of which demanded a hearing. They might contribute a good deal to the perfection of a measure which concerns not only their own livelihood but also the vitality of a school system to which many of them have devoted the best years of their lives.

We are glad that the Senate group paused long enough to provide some liberalization of the bill's sick leave provisions for attendance officers. But the action by no means restored this category of school official to the status it deserves. Attendance officers are not afforded any opportunity to secure increased compensation through the acquisition of masters' degrees—a blow to their professional standing which seems to us quite unwarranted. Dr. Corning thinks that advanced training is not requisite to their duties. But teachers, most of whom vigorously disagree with him, might have won the committee to their point of view if they had been given a chance to present their case.

The teachers might also have reversed the committee's narrow decision to deny teachers who have superior ratings but no masters' degrees the higher salary scale reserved for holders of these degrees. At least the handful who have reached the ceiling of the bachelors' degree category deserved this recognition of their long and devoted service to the District school system. Failing to grant this generosity, the committee was correct, we think, in refusing to let officers without masters' degrees be bracketed into the higher salaried category. The House committee version is plainly discriminatory. We should prefer, however, to see both groups advanced.

The teachers have understandable doubts about the provisions of the bill respecting eligibility for promotion and the in-service training program. We quite recognize the wisdom of not stipulating standards too rigidly in an act of Congress. Discretion is properly left to the Board of Education. But in respect of promotion, the board should be required, in our judgment, to publish standards of eligibility promptly after enactment of the law, so that teachers will have full opportunity to meet them. And in respect of teacher education it should be made clear that "in-service training" is not to be given any narrow application restricting the participation required of teachers to our local teacher training schools. There are many valid forms which self-improvement can take. They should be worked out and clearly defined by the Board of Education in close collaboration with the teachers.

These defects of the bill are, to be sure, relatively minor. We have already paid tribute to the joint subcommittees of Congress which produced this legislation. They deserve the thanks and commendation of the public as well as of the teachers. We hope heartily that their work will be brought to fruition by Congress as a whole. Nevertheless, there is room, we think, for perfection of the measure in the particulars we have suggested. And we continue, of course, to hope against hope that the tragically inadequate $4500 ceiling placed upon teachers' earnings will be lifted and liberalized.

Foreign Policy

When the American Society of International Law met in Washington a few weeks ago, its president, Prof. Charles Cheney Hyde, suggested the establishment of an unofficial body of advisers on foreign policy. More recently Secretary Marshall has set up a Policy Planning Staff to formulate and develop for consideration by top State Department officials, long-term programs for achievement of the objectives of our foreign policy. Here are hopeful indications that more gray matter is to be brought to bear upon the course the United States pursues in relation to world affairs in the future.

Secretary Marshall's plan seems to be a direct outgrowth of the complaint that the men who direct our foreign policy are too busy to think in terms of long-range goals. Their energy is wholly absorbed in meeting day-to-day problems. The Secretary felt, therefore, that a small group of experienced men should be wholly detached from the merry-go-round of diplomatic negotiations and policy administration. His planning staff headed by George Frost Kennan, who has a broad background of experience in Russia and Germany, will have the sole function of thinking about the efficacy of our foreign policies and about means of carrying those policies into effect. For information this planning arm may turn to the old-line divisions of the State Department, to other governmental agencies or to private sources. It may call in advisers from any source. The result should be more expert analysis of long-range problems of foreign policy than we have ever had before.

The danger is that, being an integral part of the department, this special planning staff may never attain an independence of thinking or a vision beyond the immediate problems that are troubling the department. That is where Professor Hyde's idea seems to fit into the picture. What he suggested was a small body of highly competent and trustworthy citizens, not connected with the Government, to give advice on what the probable consequences of foreign policies projected by the State Department would be. Of course, this body of elder statesmen would have to be kept fully informed. If only men of national stature were chosen, their advice would be freely and independently given, although it would not be publicized, except at the request of the Secretary of State. Such a group, working with the full-time planning staff, would probably give the Administration the best access to the collective wisdom of the people in this highly important field of policy-making.

It may be premature to suggest that a nonofficial advisorate be added to the new planning unit so soon after its establishment. But at least the planners can call upon men of the caliber of former Secretary Stimson, former Secretary Byrnes, former President Hoover, Dean Acheson and many others for counsel. The success of this experiment (which Secretary Hull tried in the war years) is likely to be measured by the extent to which the planning agency becomes a channel for bringing the wisdom of our most experienced and sagacious statesmen to bear upon foreign policy at the formative stages.

Evans F. Carlson

Brig. Gen. Evans Fordyce Carlson was a brilliant and gallant soldier, with ideas so original that he seemed a maverick to many of his contemporaries. His fame is secure with that of Carlson's Raiders in the annals of the Marine Corps. Their exploits on Makin Island and Guadalcanal became an almost legendary inspiration at a time when American morale in the Pacific was at its lowest ebb. No one can doubt that the successes of the Second Marine Raider Battalion were spearheaded by Carlson's commanding personality.

General Carlson had a deep faith in the dignity of the individual, and an equal faith in the spiritual uplift of a just cause. He managed to impart his faith to his men. He expected and received strict sublimation of the individual will to the common effort. But this was no blind obedience. Carlson took his men into his confidence. He chose his officers as much for their democratic outlook as for their professional competence. His men were all members of his team, and he welded teamwork through his ability to inculcate in every member a complete understanding of and belief in the mission. He was one of the first to apply the principles of orientation—principles of such proved value that they have since become integral parts of Army and Navy training programs.

A man of firm convictions, General Carlson made no bones about saying what he thought. He admired the Chinese Communists, not for their political outlook, but for their ideas of cooperation, or "Gung Ho," which he adapted to American purposes in the Marines. When he became convinced of the imminence of war with Japan, he resigned from the Marine Corps, so as to be free to speak his mind in warning America, returning to his military career just before Pearl Harbor. The Nation can never have too much of the kind of stimulus Evans Carlson provided.

Viewing The Press

Newspapers, which have long made it a part of their business to criticize books, drama, music and of late even radio are now due to get a taste of their own medicine—and very salutary medicine it is, too, we think. The recent report by the Commission on Freedom of the Press contained the provocative recommendation that the various elements and media of the press should undertake frank criticism of one another's performance. The Columbia Broadcasting System has taken up the idea with an alacrity which suggests that it rather relishes the responsibility, and this coming Saturday at 6:15 p. m. will inaugurate on its New York station, WCBS, a program called CBS Views the Press.

We resent nothing in this save the parochialism of the approach. The New York station will "attempt an objective examination" only of New York newspapers and of magazines and press services. Other CBS outlets, we hope, will take the cue and make the same attempt in respect of the newspapers in their own communities or regions. The criticism will be useful in direct ratio to its disregard for decorum. Newspapers all over the country need the prodding of this sort of inquiry from the outside, need to be jogged for sins of omission as well as for sins of commission. Radio can effectively point to the facets of public life the newspapers leave unreported and to the reporting which may be biased or unbalanced. And in doing this, radio will no doubt hold up a mirror to some of its own shortcomings. We quite agree, therefore, with CBS Vice President Edward R. Murrow, who believes that "freedom of the press and freedom of radio are inseparable and that mutual criticism will benefit both."

Rent Control Poll

My interest is stirred by the recent evaluation of public opinion polls (and of The Post Poll on rent control in particular) which came from Mr. Paul Miller of the Washington Guest House Association. Mr. Miller put himself on record in a hearing before the District Commissioners as hardly an enthusiast for the art and science of sampling public attitudes. True, he began by polling his own audience to find whether it contained many who knew of our poll on rent control; and he found that 80 per cent had not. But having laid this hasty sacrifice on the altar of public opinion surveying, he went on to conclude that "Polls are the most laughable things I have ever read. They don't represent anything."

The account of Mr. Miller's remarks leaves in some obscurity the grounds for the happy disillusionment that his own experiment in polling created in him. Does he feel that he should have turned up more people who had been interviewed on The Post Poll, or simply more people who had read about it?

If the first concern is his, he shows himself somewhat ingenuous. The virtue of a poll is that it can furnish information about large populations by the use of economically small cross-sections. Hence it would be astonishing if any random group of a few hundred people should contain even one or two who had been interviewed on a given poll. In the middle of the war, when both commercial and governmental agencies were sampling public reactions at a vigorous rate, someone computed that the average citizen had a chance of being interviewed on a survey only once in 18 years.

The smallness of sample which these polls can use, with accurate results, depends of course on the great advances in the mathematics of sampling that have been made in the last decade. The use of these devices by The Post Poll has been sufficiently explained in a feature article in The Post (November 17, 1946.)

Perhaps, however, Mr. Miller is not agitating technical matters of sampling. Perhaps he is simply shocked that not more than one fifth of those who heard him had read the particular Post Poll in question. If this was the case—and if he was merely carried away into a realm or critique in which the professional statistician does much better—we are prepared to join him in his disappointment.

DWIGHT W. CHAPMAN,
Assistant Research Director,

Two Verdicts

Two interesting verdicts were handed down May 21 and 22. One was the acquittal of the Greenville, S. C., citizens who were being tried as lynchers; the other was the conviction of guilt of Carl Marzani, who was accused of defrauding the Government by concealing his Communist Party affiliation. His penalty is a maximum of 110 years in jail and $110,000 fine.

In the Greenville case, the judge admonished the jury not to base its verdict on race discrimination but on the facts in the case. In the District Court, Washington, the judge admonished the jury to consider the evidence without prejudice or bias and to remember that Marzani, not that the Communist Party, was on trial.

From the verdicts, it would seem that the judges represent the minority and the juries represent the popular attitude of the majority in this country.

There's a political fine in Russia against race discrimination—but then nothing that Russia approves is popular here.

One item for the edification of the Greenville jury, at which foreigners may wonder, is that the defendant who on testimony plunged the knife in the victim now plans to get drunk for four weeks and then run for sheriff.

He "has a family claim on the job. Two of his close relatives have held office in years past, and one was convicted of manslaughter in the killing of his predecessor in office." MARGARET ROWE.
University Park, Md.

Out Of Context

In an otherwise excellent story appearing in The Post of May 21, I was quoted as saying in a talk at the Claude Swanson Junior High P-TA Forum that indirect selection of school board members is "the only way the Democrats can control the school board and school administration."

Obviously, such a statement would be untrue. Like many partial statements and quotations taken out of the context, it gives a completely erroneous picture of what was actually said. I appreciate the fact that limited space undoubtedly made it impossible to give the full background of my remarks. HARRISON MANN.
Arlington.

"$4500 Ceiling"

Do let me thank you for your editorial of May 25 on teachers' salaries.

You mentioned one phase of the new salary proposal which, I think, has dangerous possibilities, viz, the examination to be required of a teacher every five years to determine whether he will enter another period of increments. The nature of these examinations will be highly contingent. Conceivably they might become just as objectionable and short of their purpose as have the present "B" promotional examinations which have earned the stern condemnation of teachers and administrators.

What is the significance of a satisfactory rating, anyway, if it does not mean, among other things, that the teacher deserves a raise?

J. W. HAYWOOD, Jr.
Washington.

Arab Case

The United Nations demeaned itself by holding a special session to invite the Arab Higher Committee which had withdrawn its application to be heard. Nobody objects to the Arab case being heard. The objection is that the Arab Higher Committee is not a legally recognized body. It is a self-constituted group of individuals, directed in absentia, by the arch war criminal, the Mufti, and consisting mainly of his relatives and henchmen.

The Arab case is amply represented by five Arab states who hold seats in the United Nations as well as by certain great powers who appear to be in competition to win the good will of the Arab world even at the expense of international law and justice.

FRANCES KAYE.
Brentwood, Md.

"Incitement"

The righteous air of your May 22 editorial, "Incitement," in which the "terrorists in Palestine" and their "friends in America" are admonished would be more becoming if the editorial itself were not speckled with inexactitudes, misinterpretations, and deliberate misstatements.

It is a deliberate misstatement to write: "In 1944, when they (the Bergson group) sought to set up a Hebrew Embassy here, The Post spotlighted their activities as inimical to America's best interests." The articles to which your editorial writer refers maligned these organizations in many ways, but they did not suggest that they were inimical to American interests. It will be recalled that The Post "spotlighted" an editorial retraction of its charges.

It is not correct to state that the British "had entered an objection against appeals for funds for the terrorists on the grounds that in the case of organizations having tax-exemption privileges, their activities are subsidized by the American Government." For more than two years now the British government has been objecting to our State Department against the forthright appeal of the American League for a Free Palestine for funds to carry on the repatriation of Hebrews from Europe to Palestine. The British hold that this activity is "illegal." The American League maintains, and in this it has been supported by the stand of the State Department, that there is nothing illegal in aiding immigration into Palestine, that the White Paper of 1939, which the British use as their authority for stopping this immigration, is itself illegal and has been proclaimed as such by the only competent body to judge the matter, the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations.

But the most serious misstatement made in the editorial is the one on which the editorial writer bases his entire case. It is not true that the United Nations made a "plea for a cessation of terrorism." The United Nations specifically and carefully asked for a truce in Palestine. It is not true that the plea "has been rejected by the two underground groups in Palestine." Both underground resistance groups announced that they are perfectly willing to accede to the request of the United Nations, provided that the British will do the same.

The writer of your editorial is as mistaken about the word "terrorism" as he is about "truce." He would have us believe that only the Hebrew resistance is guilty of terrorism. This is not the case. It is not the difference in weapons which constitutes terrorism. Governments do not need to engage in bombings and guerilla warfare. They utilize the planes and battleships, the tanks and machine guns of their armed forces for killing people.

Illegal restrictions on repatriation that leave a million and a half people destitute and hopeless, violations of all civil rights and liberties of a peaceful population, mass arrests and deportations, concentration camps in Palestine and Kenya and Eritrea, "third degree" treatment by a new Black-and-Tan police, and the characteristic abuses of an occupying army—all these constitute the British reign of terror in Palestine. They form the links of a chain of violence in which other links are the bombings and assassinations of the underground resistance.

The world must realize that hundreds of Hebrews are dying needlessly every day in concentration camps in Europe, in pogrom Poland, in the starvation centers of Hungary, Romania, and Bulgaria, as well as in British-occupied Palestine, as a result of the imperialist policy of a Socialist government pledged to renounce imperialism.

It is in the light of these facts that one must judge the validity of your indignant criticism of the American "friends" of Hebrew resistance, and especially of the "Letter to the Terrorists of Palestine" by Ben Hecht. Nothing we can do in America will serve to stir up the "killer passions" beyond the point that they have been stirred and stimulated by British activities in Palestine.

Finally, the recommendation that funds collected in the United States be supervised by a government body carries the implication that the contributions collected by the American League for a Free Palestine and the Palestine Resistance Fund require this supervision "to protect the public." The accounts of the American League have always been and are now open to inspection. Having publicly declared the purpose for which the money collected by the American League is used, the organization does not fear any inspection which will determine that these funds are utilized precisely as their contributors want them to be used.

JOHN J. SMERTENKO,
Executive Vice Chairman American League for a Free Palestine.
Washington.

'Decadent' Women

JUST HOW members of Congress want "American womanhood," to which they so frequently pay tribute, interpreted abroad is becoming more and more of a puzzle.

Some of them still wax indignant over the picture in the State Department's modern art exhibit for overseas, "Circus Girl Resting," which they attributed to intent to libel this country's women. But also, it seems, the eminently respectable late Carrie Chapman Catt, whose name for the last three decades has headed most lists of great American women, is not a proper subject for the "Voice of America."

Representative John Taber, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, injected Mrs. Catt into the controversy in a recent criticism of the State Department's foreign broadcasting program. He cited as an example of poor subject matter a 15-minute broadcast on the career of Mrs. Catt, whom he termed "an estimable woman who died within the last several months, but concerning whom the rest of the world would have very little idea and the present generation of Americans would also have very little idea . . ."

Those women's organizations that have long venerated Mrs. Catt as a suffrage and later as a peace and education leader are indignant over her being called an unknown. They point to her wide following throughout the world and to her history-making achievements in this country. The National League of Women Voters, which she founded, is now raising an international memorial to her—a fund to help women in foreign countries prepare for voting and civic duties."

ALL OF THIS raises the question as to whether the distorted view of American women held so largely among foreign peoples is to continue—with the blessing of those Congress members who are opposing what the State Department is doing to counteract it. Through movies, magazine advertisements, sensational press dispatches, ideological propaganda, many foreign peoples have come to regard women of this country largely as pinup girls, pampered parasites, divorce chasers on the one hand, and as "Tobacco Road" peons on the other. Dr. Goebbels strengthened these distortions through his harping on "decadent" American women.

Present detractors of this country are using much the same line, though the Soviet newspaper, Komsomol Pravda, recently injected a new note. "In a bourgeois state," it pointed out, "where the wife and mother have scarcely any rights at all, the husband is permitted to be a despot in his own family circle and is free to lead a dissolute life."

One of the chief means of combating these misconceptions is the solid, documentary picture of American life the State Department has been presenting through its international information program. The broadcast about Mrs. Catt was one of a series on American women who had made lasting contribution to their country—by other means than getting on best-dressed lists, or winning bathing beauty prizes. It included such figures as Clara Barton, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Emily Dickinson, Jane Addams, Ida Tarbell.

OTHE PROGRAMS have told of women in Congress, of what women are doing in Red Cross, and other public service. Still others have portrayed the daily life of a typical homemaker, teacher, nurse, secretary, factory worker. Most popular program, which was repeated on demand, was a series on child care by an American pediatrician.

In the background news stories sent to America embassies for distribution to foreign newspapers, have been series telling how American women do their housework (not in movie homes with patios), how they participate in parent-teacher groups, Girl Scouts, rural extension clubs, how GI brides help their husbands through college, how farm women can produce and use quick-freeze processes.

Demand for such information is so great that often 25 to 30 European papers will carry the same release. Yet such material would not be considered "snappy" enough for use by commercial news or radio agencies serving foreign areas.

Curiosity about American life is tremendous throughout the world, including the Soviet Union. On the way that curiosity is satisfied will depend not only what other peoples think of American women, but what idea they get of the everyday life under the American system of government.

Not In Washington Alone

Lippmann

WHILE THERE is wide and increasing recognition that large economic measures will have to be taken by next winter to avert a collapse in Europe, it cannot be said too often or too insistently that it is not possible to plan them, or put them into effect, from Washington alone.

For the question is by no means only whether Congress and the people will be willing to appropriate large sums. It is also whether leading countries of Europe, beginning with Britain and France, can and will make Europe capable of receiving and using large sums effectively.

THERE IS, it seems to me, a disposition in Europe to assume that all depends on whether Congress will provide the money. But the fact is that Congres is likely to provide the money only if, when, and because, the European countries have themselves come together to take convincing measures to help themselves. Then our people will feel that they are investing in the future, and not merely handing out doles, that they are providing working capital for a recognized European economy and not merely paying the bills of bankrupt governments.

There is also a disturbing tendency here to assume that a European plan of recovery can be made in America. Mr. Stassen's otherwise excellent speech seemed to me to reflect much too strongly the notion that with immense funds to dispense, we would be paying the piper and could on the whole call the tune.

We shall do far better to tell our European friends and allies at the outset that we wish to help them if they will agree on a common plan of recovery; that we can help them substantially only if they do agree; that the fact that they agree to collaborate will be infinitely more important than that their agreement meet exactly specifications which we might wish them to meet; in short, that a plan which unites the leading countries of Europe will find sympathy and practical support here.

THE PLANNING in the State Department cannot be carried to its conclusion until Europe, with Britain and France taking the initiative and the leadership, begins to plan and to negotiate for its own recovery. Such a European plan will show a dollar deficit over a period of years. Our people can be persuaded to meet that dollar deficit if the European plan shows how and when the need for American grants-in-aid will no longer exist.

We can, in other words, make plans here to underwrite a European plan that most of the countries of the continent have agreed to and are bound by. But we cannot make plans here for European recovery and then offer to buy European acceptance of an American plan. Unless the plan is in truth European, it will not work. An American plan for Europe could not work. Any suggestion that we were imposing our plan would cause more trouble than money could ever cure. So we must wait until London and Paris begin to move, and get ready to meet us halfway; they with plans and agreements for the recovery of Europe so that it ceases to be so abnormally dependent upon North America; we with the working capital out of American public funds for the first phase of the plan, until normal foreign investment becomes feasible.

IN THE first phase, the operation on our side would have many resemblances to lend-lease. That is to say, we would be exporting goods, not against dollars, but against contributions to the security of this country and its interest in peace.

Under wartime lend-lease we got in return for our material contribution the victorious resistance of our allies. Though we gave a lot, they gave all they had. Lend-lease was successful not only because of what we gave but because of what they did.

The same principle will hold if lend-lease in a new form is to be established now.

Stassen's Economic Beliefs

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Harold Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota and a candidate for President, believes we will not have a serious economic recession in the near future. He believes we can regulate capitalism to sustain a high level of production.

Childs

As outlined in a previous column, in a question-and answer interview I had with him, he gave reasons for his optimism. Here are further questions and answers growing out of our informal discussion of economic problems.

CHILDS: What about concentration and monopoly?

STASSEN: That is a major phase of our problem. Particularly now, in our new position as the major creditor Nation of the world, we need to encourage world-wide investment while at the same time developing a code of regulations to prevent international monopolies and cartels and old-style imperialism. The latter could be one of the causes of future world economic crises. The profit motive in a capitalistic system causes a very natural urge toward monopolies as the easier method of obtaining profits. This trend must be checked on a world-wide basis.

CHILDS: That is a new subject, is it not?

STASSEN: Yes, and a very important one. If American capital is to go abroad with the Stars and Stripes to back it up, it is of very great importance that we give major consideration to the development of codes of conduct for that capital. In other words, the manner in which local populations are treated, the relationship between profits and local wages, the conditions of living, and the negotiations with local governments will have a major influence upon future success and freedom in those areas and upon the future success of our own free economy in America.

CHILDS: In fact are we not likely to produce communism by the old-style imperialistic approach?

STASSEN: Yes, we are. That is one reason I emphasize the need for developing a new code for the conduct of capital abroad.

CHILDS: Do you feel that in recent years we have not looked closely enough at the control of monopoly at home?

STASSEN: The Government has not been alert enough. One effect of the war was extreme concentration and greater difficulties for small businesses. A major restraint on monopoly, in addition to direct enforcement of antimonopoly laws, is to open up the avenues for new small business to begin, to compete and to grow. Our present tax structure needs modification so new small businesses can keep a greater share of their profits for their own growth and expansion. Likewise there is a need to simplify governmental regulation as it affects small business, so that the administrative overhead placed upon a new enterprise does not in itself smother its growth. For the future health of our entire economy, we need to give special attention to small business in America.

CHILDS: What about labor?

STASSEN: That is another major factor in the total approach to regulation of a dynamic capitalistic economy. We are in need of new labor legislation and a new national labor policy to reduce the number of strikes and bring about a proper balance. As you know, I testified in detail upon this before the Senate Labor Committee in January. We must be careful not to go too far in restrictions on labor. Minimum wage laws, and sound, strong labor unions are both important safeguards to prevent the drive for profits in a competitive capitalistic system from holding labor's share of the fruits of production at too low level. If this is done, the result contributes to an economic crisis from which all suffer.

CHILDS: Is it not fairly clear that this was one of the important factors in the 1929-32 depression?

STASSEN: Yes, I believe it was. We increased our national productivity and our profits through the twenties at a greater rate than we increased wages. Unions were weak, wages were held down, excessive consumer credit was used on an installment basis. Consuming power lagged behind.

CHILDS: Did you have this in mind when you gave your optimistic defense of the American system in your talk with Stalin?

STASSEN: Yes, I did. The situation now is very much different from 1929. We do not have an overextended consumer credit and we do not have wages lagging behind. Also, in 1929 you had a satiated agricultural situation with a surplus of food and a depressed rural area. There is not now and will not be in the immediate future a true world surplus of food, and we do not have a depressed agriculture. As I see it, these basic economic facts mean that we will have readjustments, but not a major depression. We have time to work out the long-term policy and broad regulations that will retain the dynamic and free qualities of our private capitalism without suffering the economic crises and crashes that have clouded its past productive accomplishments.

Mr. Hoover's Proposal

IN HIS LETTER to Representative John Taber, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, former President Hoover has made an unanswerable case in favor of action to make Germany and Japan economically self-supporting as soon as possible.

NOVER

Whether the remedy he suggests can actually do the intended job is more open to question. Just the same, his proposals do provide a useful starting point, at least, for the discussion of our future policy with respect to the occupied areas.

Certainly, the present situation that confronts us in Germany, Japan and Korea can only be described as intolerable. For two years we have poured great sums into those areas with very little to show for our efforts.

The sum of 750 million dollars is being asked by the Administration to take care of the food and essential relief needs of the occupied areas during the next fiscal year. But that sum, too, will be money poured down the drain unless and until something is done to improve the basic situation in Germany, Japan and Korea so that those areas can take care of themselves.

IN THE BIZONAL area of Germany, Mr. Hoover points out, agricultural production is now about 75 per cent of prewar. Industrial production is only at 33 per cent of 1936, with exports at around 3 per cent. The situation in Japan is not much better.

There, according to Mr. Hoover, agricultural production is 80 per cent of prewar, industrial production 30 per cent and exports about 4 per cent.

Obviously, if the present relief burden being borne by the American taxpayer in the case of the occupied areas is to be cut down, measures must be taken to permit Japan and the Anglo-American zone in Germany to export more. Only in that way can they pay for imports whose cost is now being footed by the occupying powers.

IN THE CASE of Germany, the principle of economic self-help was embodied in the Potsdam agreement. That agreement, however, has never gone into effect, very largely as a result of Russian obstructionism.

It is essential to point out, however, that the setting up of a bizonal arrangement for the British and American zones has thus far not worked out particularly well.

Take the case of the Ruhr, for instance. One of the prime purposes of the bizonal union was to increase the productivity of that vital industrial area.

Production of coal in the Ruhr remains, under Anglo-American direction, as previously under British direction, far below the prewar level. Indeed it has recently tended to decline from the not very impressive peak figure of 238,424 tons attained on April 3. Production slumped to 216,700 tons on May 3.

THIS SLUMP in the Ruhr's coal production affects not only Germany but that considerable portion of Europe which depends on Ruhr coal. The principal cause of this decline has been lack of food.

Workers who ought to be in mines have absented themselves for days at a time to tend their garden patches or forage in the country districts where the food situation is very much better than in industrial areas. In the old days much of the food consumed by the population of the Ruhr came from the east—from areas now under Russian and Polish occupation.

THE DIFFICULTIES which the British and American occupation authorities have had with Ruhr coal production emphasize the fact that the Anglo-American zones do not constitute a viable economic area.

It is open to question, therefore, whether Mr. Hoover's proposal for the drawing up of a separate peace treaty with unified Anglo-American zone, if the next meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers makes no progress, offers the solution to our German problem.

It is also open to question whether an early peace treaty with Japan either by the United States and like-minded nations alone or by all of the Allied powers, including Russia, would be wise at this juncture. There are powerful reasons why, in Japan as in Germany, the occupation ought to be continued for some time longer.

Nonetheless, if no general agreement regarding Germany and Japan can be reached, we must consider the alternative of unilateral action. In the meantime Mr. Hoover is absolutely right in insisting that our economic policies in the occupied areas need overhauling so as to make possible a greatly enhanced production and expanding exports.

As he says, "the whole world is an interlocked economy, and paralysis in two great centers of production is a world disaster."

It is also a world disaster that recovery in other areas of the world, notably in western Europe has been dangerously slow.

Side by side with overhauling our economic policies in Germany and Japan we must do all in our power to foster the unification of Europe.

If Russia is willing to join, so much the better. If not, the job must be done without her. Mr. Hoover's impatience with the dilatory and obstructionist policies of the Kremlin is shared by a vast number of Americans.

Taft Economic Questionnaire Is 'Loaded,' Murray Charges

CIO President Philip Murray charged last night that a Dun & Bradstreet questionnaire prepared for Chairman Robert A. Taft's economic report committee was "loaded" to support the committee's do-nothing stand on prices, wages and profits.

He contended in a letter to the Senate Republican leader that Congress would have served the Nation better in recent months if it had gone into economic problems instead of labor control legislation.

"A solution to our economic ills rests not with legislation directed against labor but with action on our economic front," he wrote.

"Never in the economic history of America have prices voluntarily been reduced in advance of a glutted market. If history repeats itself, we will not get a voluntary readjustment of prices but we will head into a situation of prices remaning too high for the consumer to buy, with a resultant economic depression possibly of serious magnitude."

Private Study Protested

Murray protested that the committee was setting a "serious and most disturbing precedent" by hiring a private business financial reporting house to conduct a "fair and impartial" study.

"I sincerely feel," he wrote, "that far more can be accomplished by your committee, if it were interested in studying and analyzing this problem, through the holding of public hearings."

Noting that the 1946 Employment Act passed by the last Congress required the committee to prepare "findings and recommendations" on economic conditions by February 1, Murray said:

"Four months have passed since that deadline. Your committee has not only failed to submit its findings and recommendations, but has not even held public hearings about the vital issues affecting our economic life."

Questionnaire Criticized

He said the CIO, in analyzing a copy of the questionnaire it received from Dun & Bradstreet, feels that it was "carefully designed to produce a preconceived result . . . the answer your committee desired."

For example, he said, the very first question was "loaded." He said it asked for a comparison of the second half of 1947 with the second half of 1946 when a better picture would be supplied by comparing it with the first half of 1947.

And finally, he said, a Dun & Bradstreet representative confirms that results of the questionnaires will be consolidated instead of being broken down by industrial, labor and agricultural groups. Lumping together of the results, he said, "will indubitably create considerable bias."

Sabotage Plan Foiled

Batovia, May 28 (AP). — The Netherlands East Indies government announced today it had discovered an attempt to sabotage the American-owned Goodyear rubber factory at Buitenzorg, 30 miles south of Batavia. Dutch officials declined to elaborate upon the announcement. The plant, which recently resumed production, is the only large tire factory between Japan and India.

Stassen Ready To 'Sell Out,' Wallace Says

Denver, May 28 (U.P.)—Henry A. Wallace said today that political ambitions meant nothing to him in his bid to "unite the world for peace."

He said the difference between himself and Republican presidential aspirant Harold Stassen was that Stassen "would be willing to sell out for the vice presidency and I would not."

Neither was he fighting President Truman for control of the Democratic Party, the former Vice President said.

"But if we can't make the Democratic Party liberal," he said, "we'll have to take what action is appropriate."

He parried direct questions about a third party, but said "action" would be necessary if the Democratic Party turned out to be a "war" party.

Wallace told a press conference that Stassen's and his plans for helping Europe were "about the same in policy," but he was critical of Stassen's sincerity.

"I won't want to call Harold a liar at this stage of the game," he remarked with a laugh. "But I would say that he is highly imaginative."

Wallace told reporters he had found "amazing support" throughout his cross-country lecture tour for his plans to insure world peace and help prevent depression.

He reiterated that he had no fear of communism in America.

Wallace branded the Truman order to remove Communist members and sympathizers from Government jobs as "the first step in forming a police state in the United States." It was all right to weed out Communists, he said, but a broad understanding board was needed to make the action "morally permissible."

Bill Prepared To Authorize 'Voice' of U. S.

By the United Press

The House Rules Committee yeserday approved for floor debate legislation authorizing the State Department's international information and cultural relations program. Committee Chairman Leo Allen (R., Ill.) declined to announce the vote except to say it "was not unanimous." Another member said it was 7 to 5.

Only opposition during the hearing on the bill, which previously was approved unanimously by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, came from Representatives Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio), and J. Edgar Chenoweth (R., Colo.).

Brown objected to a statement that public sentiment had changed in favor of the program, which includes the "Voice of America" broadcast to Russia and other countries.

"The change was because of a propaganda campaign put on in the last 10 days in direct violation of the Constitution of the United States," Brown said.

"There has been pressure on members of Congress and radio programs to whitewash activities that have been going on," he said.

Brown also said the committee ought to find out whether Secretary of State George C. Marshall intends to retain Assistant Secretary of State William Benton as director of the program.

The House Appropriations Committee recently cut out all of the $1,381,000 requested for the program because the information project had not been authorized by law and because the committee objected to certain phases of the program.

Things Break Thick and Fast In Hawthorne

Hawthorne, Calif., May 28 (AP). The hullabaloo could be heard from here to there last night when long-smoldering municipal conflict broke out in, around and all over a city council meeting.

Before the uproar ended the council fired Street Superintendent William J. Kaiser, demoted Police Chief Jack Baumgardner to sergeant and appointed Lieut. E. J. Parker as chief, set July 3 for an election on recall of Mayor Walter J. Hawley, Councilmen Wilbur M. Long and Clarence Wilbanke and City Clerk Emily Riley.

That, however, was just the beginning. The volunteer fire department resigned en masse to protest over Superintendent Kaiser's discharge. Five fire alarms came in. Only two paid fire truck opeerators were on hand. Policemen rushed to help on the fire alarms, four of which turned out to be false and the other, a grass fire.

While the fire sirens screeched an unidentified man walked into the council hall, punched Councilman Long, knocking him down, and walked out, unmolested because the policemen were out fire-fighting.

Finally, when Mayor Hawley started home he found all the tires on his automobile flat.

2 Worked Backstage To Boost Wool Bill

By Drew Pearson

WHEN Congress passed its very controversial wool bill—which will raise the tariff on wool—two men operated backstage to help write the legislation. They were Clinton M. Hester and M. M. Kearney, who represent the Boston wool trade and the National Wool Trade Association.

Hester

However, despite the fact that Kearney and Hester acted as lobbyists in the ordinary understanding of the word, the strange thing is neither of them registered as lobbyists.

Hester had his brother, Ewart, registered as a lobbyist at a salary of only $5000. But in wool trade circles, it is reported that C. M. Hester receives $18,000 from the wool traders. Three Congressmen admitted that Kearney and Hester lobbied with them on behalf of the wool bill, yet Congressmen let them get away with ignoring the lobbying law.

Battle Over Greece

A SIGNIFICANT battle is going on backstage over how to handle Greek aid. Two Cabinet members, Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, have been adamant that the Greek government drop its reactionary cabinet and restore civil liberties before we start pouring in the dollars. In various inter-Cabinet discussions, they and their representatives have stood pat on this.

However, the State Department's Loy Henderson says this would be interfering with Greek sovereignty. The matter is still being debated.

Note.—Neutral foreign diplomats believe that if the State Department wins, you can just about kiss that quarter of a billion dollars goodby. It won't stop communism and it won't end hunger. It will wind up in the pockets of Greece's "sixty families."

Strike Holds Up GI Caskets

THE WAR Department, which has been handling with painstaking care the unhappy work of returning the bodies of GI heroes from overseas, has run up against a snag. Strikes in the casket-making industry will probably make it impossible to bring the bodies home on schedule.

The work of returning about 200,000 war dead is much more difficult than most people can imagine. First of all, letters were sent to next of kin asking whether they wish their GI heroes returned to this country or buried in a military cemetery abroad. Actually, American military cemeteries overseas have been among the best kept and beautiful in the world. However, most relatives have elected to have the bodies returned.

The War Department had worked out a schedule for the shipment of caskets, but now strikes have occurred in two key companies manufacturing parts for caskets—Goodyear Aircraft and the Warren City Stamping Co.

"The outlook is most pessimistic," John H. Fanning, labor relations expert for the Judge Advocate General's office, has reported to Gen. Herman Feldman, Deputy Quartermaster General. "Both the companies and the union are being adamant. The attitude of the companies is that they are the only ones who make caskets and whether they are delayed a week or a month isn't particularly bad, because they don't have the commercial incentive."

When War Department officials visited the Goodyear Aircraft Corp. which is supplying parts to casket makers, the CIO union was quite cooperative and agreed to the removal of all finished parts on hand. However, the management objected.

At the Warren Stamping Co., also making parts for caskets, another officer of the same union refused any cooperation with the War Department. According to a War Department report he was "intoxicated and abusive," and said the only way casket parts could be removed from the plant "would be by troops under arms with the actual exertion of force."

Meanwhile, casket production for the Army has reached a dead stop.

British Arms for Greece

DESPITE official intimations to the contrary, Great Britain will definitely get about 65 million dollars out of the money we voted for Greece and Turkey. Here is how she will get it.

The Greek army is British-trained and British-equipped. And the British have convinced the State Department that it would be dangerous to substitute American arms for British arms, because a Greek division at the front equipped with British guns might receive ammunition designed for American guns.

Therefore, the State Department has agreed to buy about 65 million dollars' worth of additional British arms to supply the Greek army.

Rebuilding Germany

ONE of the most significant arguments affecting the peace of the world has been going on long-distance between Washington and Berlin. It is over the rebuilding of Germany.

Finally, last Tuesday, Secretary of War Patterson ordered his assistant secretary, Howard Petersen, to fly to Germany to settle an argument face to face with General Clay. Clay and the War Department do not agree on the program for reviving Germany. The War Department plans to spend 750 million dollars additional to rebuild German industry. But General Clay is afraid rebuilding German industry also means rebuilding the German military.

The big question-mark is where to draw the line between civilian industry and warmaking industry. Once you build up German steel, for instance, you have the basis for a German war machine.

John L. Lewis Dickers

BIGGEST stumbling block in current negotiations between John L. Lewis and coal-mine operators is the health and welfare fund.

Under a contract with the Government, 5 cents is paid into the miners' welfare fund for each ton of coal mined. Approximately 20 million dollars has been paid in so far, and the money is administered by a board of three—a miner, an operator, and a representative of the public.

Lewis is now demanding that the welfare fund assessment be increased from 5 to 10 cents on each ton as of June 30—the date mines are returned to the operators.

It's suspected Lewis actually hopes to get 5 cents, the present assessment, but is demanding 10 cents for bargaining purposes.

So far, however, operator spokesmen have turned a deaf ear even to 5 cents, though some of the Southern operators have made a counterproposal of 2½ cents a ton.

Meantime, Representative Gerald Landis of Indiana has entered the picture with a plan to break the deadlock. Landis, a former coal miner, has suggested to operator spokesman that they agree to continue paying 5 cents a ton into the welfare fund, with the condition that half the money collected be returned to local mining communities and kept in reserve to meet local relief needs for mine families not now covered by the welfare fund.

The operator spokesmen have tentatively accepted the Landis proposal, but Lewis, according to insiders in the negotiations, will not agree to splitting up the welfare fund. In the end, however, this may be a compromise way out.

Retirement Measure Won't Be Abandoned

RETIREMENT: The Langer-Chavez retirement bill won't be abandoned. This was agreed to yesterday at a meeting at a meeting of its backers who punched holes in the report of Civil Service actuaries that the bill would cost the Government about 105 million dollars a year.

Kluttz

But as a safety measure, employe leaders believe Congress should pass an emergency bill to provide pensions for long-time employes who are fired and who haven't reached the optional retirement age. The only provision of this kind, the Forand Act, expires June 30 at a time when it's most needed. That act provides retirement on a reduced annuity at 55 after 25 years of service.

The actuaries' report, it's charged, is based on "false assumptions," such as: that there will always be two million Federal workers (the number is now smaller; that Government men will die at an average age of 52 and each leave two minor children, and that future employment was based on what happened during the depression period.

WAR: Its 1948 appropriation bill will be reported to the House today and it's likely to carry more bad news for its civilian employes.

HOLIDAY: Even though tomorrow is a holiday, a sizable group will be working on budget and lay-off plans throughout Government. Double time is supposed to be paid to all those who must work . . . FPHA: Officials in this housing agency say no lay-off notices will be given employes in anticipation of budget cuts by Congress. Its appropriation won't be reported to the House for another 10 days . . . WAR: Look for Donald Bostock to join the exodus from this department. He's the hard-working chief of inspections in the Civilian Personnel office.

PEOPLE: Jack Blandford is back after working 18 months trying to reorganize the Chinese government. It's a good bet he'll end up with a top job in the State Department . . . Senate members have received word that Senator Bilbo will not return here during this session of Congress . . . Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) is ready to push his resolution for an investigation of the efficiency rating system.

OPA: The remains of this once huge price agency will be transferred to Commerce early next week. By June 30, less than 50 employes will remain. Notices yesterday went to the last big bloc of 250 employes.

SECRET SERVICE: The $102,900 restored to its budget by the Senate Appropriations Committee is earmarked for White House police. The money couldn't be used, if the agency gets it eventually, to recall some of the Secret Service agents who have been laid off . . . H. J. Cohen formerly of State and War Assets, has resigned from Government to enter law practice here . . . The Thye Subcommittee of the Senate Civil Service Committee will go into the downgrading War Department arbitrary method of firing and civilians at 2 p. m. Monday.

POD: Alfred H. Black retired yesterday from the Postoffice Department where he had worked for 49 years. He was chief of the cost ascertainment division . . . JUSTICE: B. J. Monkiewicz, former GOP Congressman from Connecticut, yesterday was appointed a member of the board of parole . . . STATE: Permanents and veterans in its office of information and cultural affairs are peeved. The office has been declared an area of competition and every employe in it will get a provisional dismissal notice. Those in it with job preference rights are demanding the right to compete for jobs in other State offices.

AGRICULTURE: Said Representative H. Carl Anderson (R., Minn.) during House debate on its appropriation bill:

"I think it is time to get some of these attorneys out of the Solicitor's office as well as some of the numerous employes out of REA. These people can do something more worthwhile for the Government than they are doing in those particular jobs." . . . At another point, Representative Phillips (R., Calif.) said the department was spending $175,000 to teach people to eat fish.

ATOMIC ENERGY: This agency is swamped by job seekers. You're just wasting your time when you apply for a routine job. The only people AEC needs aren't looking for work . . . LABOR: They say here that its solicitor's office must be expanded to pass on all the claims growing out of the portal-to-portal law . . . COMMERCE: About 150 jobs are tied up in the President's request for continuation of export controls. The people in them will be out unless the Congress approves the President's plan.

Henry Herzog Heads Local Controllers

By S. Oliver Goodman

Henry W. Herzog, comptroller of George Washington University, is the new president of the District of Columbia Control of Controllers Institute of America.

HERZOG

Also elected at a dinner meeting Tuesday night in the Carlton Hotel are H. Randolph Barbee of Federal Storage Co., vice president; Charles L. Carr of Potomac Electric Power Co, treasurer; Walter L. Brauer of U. S. News Publishing Corp., secretary.

Herzog, the new president, is completing his sixteenth year with G. W. U. A native of Washington, he is a graduate of McKinley High and G. W. U.

Elected to the board of directors are Milton A. Barlow, Robert J. Garner, Raymond G. Lochiel and Howard G. Oberlander.

Guest speaker was Hayes Dever, secretary of Capital Airlines, who stated that the airline outlook appeared to be brighter after an 18-month transition period. Deficits, he said, should be supplanted by rising profits as the air industry has eliminated many difficult problems.

Gas Company's Net Rises

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported a $13,719 increase in April net income, as compared with the same month last year, attributable to the cooler weather this year.

Net income for the month was $155,881, against $142,162 last year.

For the first four months net income of $878,662 was $10,735 less than in the corresponding 1946 period.

Total gas sales for April were 12,247,348 therms, a gain of 22 per cent. For the District of Columbia alone gas sales totaled 9,101,377 therms in April, against 7,576,466 in the same 1946 month.

Sales Gain Narrows Here

Washington Department Store sales in the first four months this year showed a 1 per cent increase over the same period last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

The narrowed increase was due to a 3 per cent decline in local sales for April, which in turn was attributed to the earlier Easter date this year.

Regionally, the Fifth Federal Reserve District showed a sales gain of 1 per cent in April and 4 per cent for the four-month period.

Virginia Bankers to Hear Bell

Daniel W. Bell, president of American Security & Trust Co., Washington, will address the annual meeting tomorrow of the Virginia Bankers Association at Virginia Beach. The three-day convention opens today.

Among the problems facing the bankers is the question of asking for legislation—whether mandatory or permissive—to allow banks to close on Saturdays. In a preconvention poll 52.3 per cent favored some sort of permissive legislation, while 39.2 per cent were opposed. The remainder expressed no opinion.

N. & W. Stock Split Approved

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday authorized the Norfolk & Western Railway to make a 4-for-1 split-up of both its common and preferred stock.

The company will issue 5,625,932 shares of common in exchange for the 1,406,483 shares now outstanding, and will issue 920,900 shares of preferred in exchange for the outstanding issue of 230,000 shares.

Both common and preferred now have a par value of $100. The par of both the new common and the new preferred will be $25.

The company asked the authority for the purpose of obtaining a wider distribution of its shares and to "facilitate future financing."

Eliminates Notarized Forms

As part of its program to cut "red tape" and to streamline administrative procedures, The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York has discontinued the use of notarized forms, it was announced yesterday by Alexander E. Patterson, president.

Elimination of notarization requirements and provision for a simple witnessing in their stead were the results of a review and overhaul of the company's forms in the past year, spurred by a survey which showed that policyholders were annoyed by the traditional necessity for having all manner of life insurance forms notarized.

Eastern Air Lines Announces

NEW-TYPE CONSTELLATIONS

EASTERN AIR LINES will soon put into service the New-Type Constellation. This is the first appearance on any airline in the world of this new-type passenger plane which has been specially designed and appointed for commercial use. In our judgment it is the world's most modern airliner. After two years of careful consideration, it was chosen by Eastern Air Lines for very specific reasons.

Our entire technical staff made exhaustive studies of all the large commercial planes under production in the aviation industry. They looked at various planes under all stages of completion. The answer for the best in air transportation is, in our opinion, the New-Type Constellation.

This airliner was developed from the Constellation that for three years had demonstrated such great dependability in long-range military service all over the world. It has been tried and proven. Today this new plane embodies every advanced feature of aeronautical design that science has perfected. Many are exclusive to the New-Type Constellation—for example, this new airliner alone has the extra speed and dependability of four mighty Wright engines developing a full 10,000 horsepower.

We of Eastern Air Lines extend our heartiest congratulations to Lockheed and to Wright Aeronautical for their great achievement in producing this—the finest of all airliners.

Eddie V. Rickenbacker

CAPT. EDDIE V. RICKENBACKER

World's Most Powerful Airliner!

Four new-type Wright Cyclone-18 engines tested and proven in long-range military service. 10,000 horsepower, greatest of any commercial airplane.

World's Most Dependable Airliner!

Greatest reserve of power—flies easily and can actually gain altitude even under full load, on any two of its four mighty engines.

World's Fastest Airliner!

Speeds well over 300 miles an hour—faster, smoother speed than any commercial airliner now in service.

The World's Most Modern Airliner!

It will be only a matter of days until New-Type Constellations go into service on Eastern Air Lines. Look forward to a new luxury, a new delight in air travel. Because never before has there been a passenger plane like this one.

Besides being the most powerful, the most dependable and the fastest airliner in service, it will bring you a new standard in comfort, smoothness and convenience. For instance, this plane has two entrances, to make boarding and leaving easier for you. Its semi-floating cabin is cushion-mounted on rubber to make your ride quiet, eliminate vibration and bring you smooth flight. You will find the seats deep-down comfortable—you will admire the beautifully appointed interiors—you will appreciate the air-conditioned, comfort-controlled cabins for restful, refreshing flight at any altitude.

Aboard the New-Type Constellation you will find the service superb. There's a crew of five: a seasoned captain, a skilled pilot, a flight engineer to supervise all mechanical operations and two courteous cabin attendants.

This is air travel at its best and most modern. It is what you would expect from Eastern Air Lines first. And Eastern is first again—with the world's most modern airliner.

These New-Type Constellations expand the services of the already famous Great Silver Fleet of DC-3's and DC-4's.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IT'S NICE TO THINK that big league ballplayers try to win games out of a sense of duty to the club owners, the stockholders, the customers and the manager—it's nice to think so, but unfortunately the evidence is lacking. Take the case of the Yankees.

POVICH

Last week six Yankees were slapped with fines by President Larry MacPhail and what they said about MacPhail was unprintable. The Yankees, from top to bottom, were in no gentle mood, anyway. They had just dropped a three-game series to Cleveland, and this new front-office blast was supposed to raise hob with what was left of the club's morale because a team of malcontents is supposedly half-licked when it goes on the field.

And so what happened to the Yankees? They went out and won their next five in a row, three of them shut-outs, and played their best ball of the season. Certainly not out of any great loyalty to MacPhail, but for the high personal pleasure of winning ball games and making a lot of money for themselves on next year's contracts.

On occasion, ball players have loafed while in the field, but I've never seen a ball players up at bat with anything but an irresistible impulse to knock the ball down the pitcher's throat, no matter what may be his relations with the front office.

JOE DIMAGGIO, the Yankee who was most outraged by the $100 fine levied against him by Machail for "not cooperating in the club's promotional activities," did the nice thing in Yankee Stadium the other night, which was billed as stunt night by MacPhail.

DiMaggio was one of six right-handed hitters entered in a home-run contest between the Red Sox and Yankees before the game. To the man who hit the most home runs against nine batting practice pitches would go first prize of $100. Even the fat pitches of the batting practice hurlers failed to produce even one homer from the bats of DiMaggio, Rudy York, Bobby Doerr, Dom DiMaggio and the other hefty hitters selected for the contest.

So the club announced that the right-handed hitter who batted out a homer, if any, during the ball game would come in for the $100 prize. The game did produce a homer, by Joe DiMaggio, and when he was handed a $100 check by Yankee Secretary Arthur Patterson, he had the means to pay his $100 fine.

But Di Maggio accepted the check only until he could indorse it in favor of the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund which, he said, needed the money more than he did.

DESPITE THE FRICTION with MacPhail, the Yankees were thinking in pennant terms before the week was out, particularly after knocking off the Red Sox in four straight, including a 17-to-2 game that represented their offensive peak for the season. Ringleader of the Yankee pennant talk is DiMaggio, whose recent batting surge has featured the club's play.

"If one guy on this club can hit like he's supposed to, we'll win it," said DiMaggio the other day.

Who was the one guy? "Joe DiMaggio," said Joe DiMaggio. "I let the club down during that Cleveland series when we lost three in a row."

A recheck showed that DiMaggio got his hits during the Cleveland series, but he said he didn't mean that he wasn't getting his hits. "I didn't get 'em when they counted. Figure it up and you'll see I left 19 men on base during those three games. I wasn't hitting when my hits would count."

That's why Bucky Harris, in his new job as the Yankee' manager, cottoned to DiMaggio instantly. "The two greatest guys who ever played ball for me in the 24 years I've been managing clubs, are Walter Johnson and Joe DiMaggio."

IF THE YANKEES DON'T have any more luck for the rest of the season, they've already had a full measure. The best thing that happened to the Yankees this year was a telephone call from Arlington, Va., to Bucky Harris' New York hotel last January. The caller was George McQuinn, given his unconditional release by Connie Mack a few days before.

McQuinn was inquiring naively of Harris if he wanted to win the pennant. "Then sign me," he said with a laugh. Harris, in no position to be choosy about a first baseman, and remembering the 35-year-old McQuinn as a fancy fielder, at least, summoned the fellow to New York and signed him.

To sign with the Yankees, McQuinn was making a sacrifice. Detroit, also in need of a first baseman, had offered him a contract and a guarantee that he would not be released during the year. The Yankees offered him only a "trial" with no guarantees, but McQuinn was nursing a long-time ambition to be a Yankee, and took the greater gamble.

At a time, two months ago, when the Yankees were offering $250,000 in cash and players for Mickey Vernon, they were discounting McQuinn. Look at him now, with a .392 batting average that leads the league, hitless in only four games, and 42 points ahead of his closest challenger.

Washington Horse Beats Seven Rivals In Inaugural

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., May 28.—Frosty River, owned by Wayne Kendrick of Washington, D. C., gave the cold shoulder to seven rivals and ran off with the Charles Town Inaugural Purse.

The 5-year-old mare walked postward as cool as the proverbial cucumber but was hot as a firecracker when the action began. The daughter of Cold Stream won by a length margin.

J. K. Wynkoop's Dr. Johnson was second, two lengths in front of a dead heat for third involving J. J. Ring's Dainger Girl and Martin and Early's Spikery.

The day's show marked the start of the 48-day meeting here beside the Blue Ridge Mountains and those who bet Frosty River collected a $16.40 mutuel. With racing conditions perfect, a crowd of 6000 welcomed the bangtails to this area.

Jockey Kirk Up on Winner

Both Washington and the suburbs had a hand in Frosty River's victory. In addition to being owned by Kendrick, Frosty River was ridden by Jockey Woodrow Kirk of Silver Springs, Md.

Frosty River came out of the starting gate as if somebody had rubbed an icicle down his back. Once out of the stall, the mare cut over from the number 8 post position and barely missed racking up the field.

Dainger Girl and Dr. Johnson followed the ultimate winner into the clubhouse turn. From that point to the end, this pair made repeated efforts to get to Frosty River but to no avail. Kirk kept pumping and Frosty River kept going.

At the end there was a bit of daylight showing between the mare and Dr. Johnson. Dainger Girl weakened and came into the wire with Spikery.

Ter Third Victory

The battle was over seven furlongs of fast track and Frosty River was clocked in 1:26 3/5. It was the third victory for the five-year-old. She won two races last winter at Sunshine Park, Tampa, Fla.

The day's most popular victory was scored by Mrs. Dan Chamblin's Tatu, ridden by Jockey Johnny Tammaro in the seventh race. He was picked up off the track last December with a badly fractured leg and it was feared he would never ride again. However, he booted Tatu along all the way to win to the cheers of the favorite players who collected $6.

The Daily Double paid $185.20. Clifford Gross' Ecobout, at $22 won the first while Martin and Early's Bib Ado took the second at $14.40.

Democrats, GOP Play Charity Game

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Sports Writer

TENSION increased in political Washington yesterday.

Quick furtive conferences . . . hasty huddles in the cloak rooms . . . battle plans made and then rejected.

Price

Both sides predicted victory. Both seemed to be looking confidently toward June 8, when the Republicans play the Democrats in a game of alleged baseball.

The proceeds go to the local Police Boys' Club. And Congressmen not only will play, but also will sell everything from tickets to peanuts.

The rival managers, Representatives Bishop (R., Ill.) and Emory Price (D., Fla.), issued identical statements:

"Right will triumph. We foresee an easy victory."

But a study of the congressional letters of acceptance shows there may be trouble ahead.

For instance, the Democrats may have too much talent.

"Being one of the greatest ball players ever to come out of our beloved Southland," Representative Rivers (D., S. C.) accepted with pleasure.

And Representative Madden (D., Ind.) answer with one sentence: "I am a pitcher, and a good one."

ON THE other hand, the Republicans have their troubles, too. Most of them want to be umpires. Representative Hill (R., Col.) possibly disclosed why.

"If I could arrange to be umpire." He wrote, "I can tell you in advance who would win."

Bishop

Representative McGregor (R.-Ohio) said he played in two previous benefit games, and added:

"Owing to the fact that I was able to get out of bed in two weeks, I am glad to take the chance again."

Price reported only one dissenter. A cranky character who did not sign his name.

"This would certainly be one additional way to increase or promote heart failure which is alerady the greatest killer of men our ages." The dissenter wrote.

"We are no longer boys. Let's be and act our age. Unless of course some of the members wish to commit suicide.

"This idea would certainly be popular with the folks back home—$12,000 per year to play ball."

And our unidentified Congressman wound up with:

"The United States Congress is not a Kiwanis club."

Servo Helping Lew Hanbury Prep for Jones

Manager Al Weill yesterday announced that Marty Servo, retired, undefeated world's welterweight boxing champion, is working out with Lew Hanbury, local lightweight, in Asbury Park, N. J., as Lew continues pointing for his 10-round bout with Herbie "Biff" Jones, his home town rival, at Griffith Stadium Monday night.

Joe "Sandy" Sandler, Jersey featherweight, meets Jimmy Carter, New York lightweight, in a cofeatured 10-rounder on the same card.

Servo and Hanbury worked out in the Asbury Park Y. M. C. A. gymnasium yesterday and will drill there again today before Lew reports here late tonight.

It was a head-on collision with Hanbury last August 29 that reinjured Servo's nose, first damaged in his bout with Rocky Graziano, and caused Weill to cancel Marty's championship defense against Ray Robinson on September 6. The New York Boxing Commission suspended both Servo and Weill indefinitely for refusing to go through with the title bout, and Servo withdrew all claims to the championship.

Both Weill and Servo were reinstated by the New York Solons last May 9, and yesterday was Marty's first drill as he launched the comback that he hopes will again carry him to the top of the 147-pounders.

Both Hanbury and Jones are to work out in public at the Liberty A. C. gymnasium tomorrow and Saturday when Lew goes into the ring at 2 p. m., and "Biff" an hour later.

Meanwhile, tickets scaled at from $2.00 to $5.00, plus tax, are on sale for Monday night's show at the Liberty Club, 419 9th st. nw., and at Griffith Stadium.

Billy Conn Planning to Fight Again

Pittsburgh, May 28 (AP).—Billy Conn, retired Pittsburgh boxing master, said today he would attempt a heavyweight comeback if he "can get in satisfactory shape."

He said he would need "about two months" to answer that question.

BILLY CONN

. . . He hasn't had enough

York's Twentieth Century Boxing Club, came to Pittsburgh to talk "comeback" with Conn.

Under Jacob's auspices, Conn tried twice, unsuccessfully, to lift Champion Joe Louis' crown.

"Strauss offered me a chance to come back any time I'm ready," Billy said.

"I'll try to get in shape. I'll see how it goes and if I find I still have it, I'll start fighting again. I'll need about two months to see if I can get in satisfactory shape."

"He offered me anybody I want, anytime I want, any place I want," Conn declared. He hastened to add that "anybody" did not include Louis without some preliminary ring testing.

"I want a couple of tune-ups before I ever think of another title fight," Billy said. "I think I should have had a couple before I fought Joe last June."

Billy was kayoed in eight rounds by Louis after a disappointing showing in New York in June, 1946. That fight caused his retirement.

Now nearing 30 (his birthday is in October) Conn has been training lightly at a Pittsburgh gym "just to keep myself in shape." He weighs about 192, only a little more than he did against Louis the last time out.

"I'm just a kid yet compared to some of those old guys who are in there fighting now," Conn laughed.

Bosox Down A's, 9-2, As Ferriss Wins Fourth

Philadelphia, May 28 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, flashing again the power that carried them to an American League championship last year, blasted the Philadelphia Athletics, 9-2, tody before 12,453.

One big inning won the ball game as the Sox shelled starter Jesse Flores and Reliefer Bill McCahan from the hill with a 7-run splurge in the fifth. Wally Moses hit a single and double in the big frame, and Don DiMaggio and Bobby Doerr each batted in a pair of runs.

Boston's other two runs came in the second when Rudy York hammered his fifth home run of the season into the left field stands with Ted Williams aboard.

Big Dave (Boo) Ferris, racking up his third win against four losses, had trouble with only two Philadelphia batters. Catcher Mickey Guerra connected for three of the A's seven hits, and Rookie Outfielder Dick Adams homered with the bases empty in the eighth. Gene Handley tore ligaments in his left knee chasing a pop single in the fifth and will be lost to the A's indefinitely.

Dodgers Bury Giants, 14-2, Before 28,260

New York, May 28 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers unlimbered their big guns with a 19-hit assault against a quartet of Giant pitchers today for a 14-2 victory.

Ringleader of the Brooks' second straight conquest over the New Yorkers, was stocky Bruce Edwards. The catcher belted a triple with three mates on in the fifth inning off Relief Hurler Bill Voiselle and clouted a three-run homer in the seventh off Bill Ayers, third Giant finger. Edwards also got a single for a three out of five day.

Dixie Walker connected for only one blow otday but it was a four-bagger with two on in the eighth. A third Brooklyn homer was poled by Eddie Miksis who replaced Second Baseman Eddie Stanky when the latter was tossed out of the contest for arguing a play. Miksis also rapped out two singles.

With that kind of batting support, Rookie Righthander Harry Taylor, who came up from St. Paul late last year, stood the Giants on their ears for seven of the nine innings.

He gave up tow hits in the first inning and three in the eighth and in between and after he held them hitless. The Giants' first run in the opening frame came in when Taylor threw badly in attempting to pick Bobby Thomson off second. Thomson had doubled. In the ninth, Taylor eased up and the Giants scored the final tally on three singles.

Taylor, himself, drove in two runs with a double off Starter Larry Jansen in the fourth inning.

Jansen, who had a 3-0 record, was clubbed for eight safeties in four innings and was charged with his first defeat of the year.

Some 28,260 Polo Grounds fans, witnessed the debacle.

Harness Action Off Until July

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission has decided there'll be no consideration of harness racing applications until after the new chairman, Stuart S. Janney, jr., takes office on July 1.

The commission announced today it had postponed any action on the applications, 11 of which are on file, over the objections of chairman George P. Mahoney.

Trainer Burch Buys Pipette for $38,000

New York, May 28 (AP).—Pipette, one of 1946's leading two-year-old fillies, who won five races and $60,660 last season, was sold today for $38,000. Top price of an auction of horses at Belmont Park.

The brown filly was bought from the estate of the late W. H. Laboyteaux, Hondel (N.J.) insurance executive, by Trainer Preston Burch.

Classy Field In Hunt Show

The twenty-seventh annual holding of the Richmond (Va.) Deep Run Hunt horse show Saturday and Sunday reports an unprecedented entry of top equines. The District area will be represented by a classy field of hunters and jumpers.

Among the jumpers vanning to Richmond will be Mrs. Gardner Hallman's versatile Gray Lark and Robert C. Lee's flashy Bonne Fille. U. S. Randle's Spider who performs at his best when the jumps start mounting will also compete.

Local hunters invading the Richmond territory will include four from the Ballantrae string headed by the brilliant Aristocrat, 1946 Madison Square Garden Green Hunter champion. Ballantrae's Meadow Play, Lucretia and The Squire will show against their more experienced stablemate, Mrs. John Maloney's Prompt Payment, Reserve Conformation Hunter champion at last year's Garden event, and Substitution, Warrenton reserve champion, will challenge the top chasers. U. S. Randle will send his veteran ribbon-winning hunter Chase and Endeavor, a newcomer to the Randle stable.

Finally on Sunday, St. Timothy's Church at Herndon, Va., will open its doors to a horse show at Fairgrounds on the Chicago Belting Lee estate near Herndon, Va., at 12:30 p. m. A Virginia and a scurried with hunter and jumper championships and Reserve Champ for gaited and the ladies' mount are also listed.

Drivers Rush To Qualify at Indianapolis

Indianapolis, May 28 (AP).—Hustling to beat the sundown deadline for qualifications for Friday's 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway drivers, drivers swarmed onto the track today.

Chief Steward Jack Mehan warned the drivers who had not yet taken the time test there would be no relaxation of the rules and that cars unqualified by dusk would not get into the race.

The track will be closed tomorrow, given a final scrubbing and the big enclosure put in shape for race day. The 16 places that remained open in the starting field of 33 after yesterday's qualification session began to fill up rapidly today.

Bullet Proof Won't Start in Belmont

New York, May 28 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Elizabeth (Liz) Whitney's Bulle Proof, which became a likely candidate for Saturday's Belmont Stakes with his surprise appearance at Belmont yesterday, was eliminated from consideration as a starter today when he was shipped from the Long Island track.

The pint-sized Virginia-bred colt, which won the Chesapeake Stakes but finished out of the money in the Derby and Preakness, had arrived only yesterday and was immdiately given a workout of a mile in 1:45.

Veteran Doc Cramer Pinch-Hitting at Amazing .545 Clip

Detroit, May 28 (AP).—A graying 41-year-old outfield veteran of 19 seasons in the American League, the ever-young Roger (Doc Cramer, is the hittingest guy with the league-leading Detroit Tigers today, although he hasn't once trotted out to the center field position he handled regularly for Detroit's world champions of 1945.

The Tigers have played 35 games to date and the amazing Cramer has been in 12 of them strictly as a pinch-hitter.

But once has Doc handled a chance in the field, but he's making real key with his chances at the plate, banging out six hits—all of them singles—in 11 times at bat for a "clutch" hitting average of .545.

Every time Cramer steps to the plate the grounds is on, but there's no denying up for a fellow who has played with four American League clubs since he broke into the majors in 1929, when some of his current fellow teammates were 2 years old.

His payoff punch as pinch hitter has delivered seven important Tiger runs across the plate this season, sufficient evidence that his pinch licks are coming at opportune times.

"I like to bat, so this pinch-hitting role isn't so bad," Cramer declared. "My only objection to playing this way is that the Tigers are always in a bad way when Manager Steve O'Neill calls on me. I sit on the bench pulling for our boys to get out ahead and stay there I'm actually wishing myself out of work. That's not so good."

Cramer's value to the Detroit Club, even as a pinch-hitter alone, can't be laughed down, for if he never plays an inning in the outfield he still can earn his approximately $10,000 in salary this season in runs batted-in.

Right now he's knocked in nearly twice as many runs as Eddie Mayo, the Tigers' regular second baseman, and he's just two RBI's behind Dick Wakefield and Eddie Lake, who have been in every game the Tigers have played.

"Sometimes," O'Neill declared sagely, "A dependable hitter is of value too a club in the dugout than he would be on the field. When he's not in the regular line-up you can pick your spots to send him up too hit.

"We've picked some dandies for Doc this season and it's just adding a run for our side when we send him up there. You can't beat that."

Cramer will be 42 years old next July 22 but he's harboring no thoughts of retirement.

"You can't quit when you're getting as big a kick out of the game as you ever did," Doc grinned.

There's still plenty of kick in Cramer's big bat, too.

Post Entries To Be Accepted For Mid Atlantic

Charlottesville, Va., May 28 (AP). Post entries for the Middleatlantic Amateur golf tournament will continue to be received until the time of qualifying play on Friday, although the deadline for entries was originally set for 6 a. m., last night.

Dr. Robert Kleity of Washington secretary, is coming here today to superintend the making out of pairings tonight, but last minute entries will be accorded a place in the qualifying round.

Volney Burnett of Washington, will head a delegation of golfers from the Nation's Capital. Among top challengers for his crown is expected to be Walter Hagen, jr., now of Richmond, son of the famous pro golfer.

Qualifying will be completed Friday and two 18-hole rounds of match play will be played Saturday and again Sunday.

Steelers Sign Vol

Knoxville, Tenn., May 28 (AP).—Walter Slater of Providence, R. I., tailback and captain of the University of Tennessee football team, said today he had signed a contract to play professional football with the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National League.

50 Area Golfers Play Monday For Five Places in U. S. Open

Five places have been allotted to area golfers in the National Open qualifying tests which will be held Monday at the Country Club of Maryland.

A field of 50 will contest for the five places for the Open, which will be played at St. Louis June 9. The field is composed of 41 pros and nine amateurs.

Lew Worsham, Washington and Oakmont, Pa., is an automatic qualifier.

The near record field of 1318 golfers seeking places in the forty-seventh Open at St. Louis next month will compete in sectional qualifying rounds at 26 locations.

The Chicago district tops the entire list with a total of 130 entries and 12 qualifying places. Other big fields will compete at St. Louis, Kansas City and New York.

Of the total entry of 1363, second largest in Open championship history, 45 places already have been allotted to former champions, last year's low scorers, winners of other major titles and to members of the 1947 Walker Cup team.

Bobby Locke, visiting South African pro, who has been performing brilliantly in American tournaments, will have to qualify in sectional play.

The exempt list:

Former Open champions—Tommy Armour (1927), Billy Burke (1931), Chick Evans (1916), John Goodman (1933), Ralph Guldahl (1937-38), Lawson Little (1940), Tony Manero (1936), Lloyd Mangrum (1946), Sam Parks, jr. (1935), Gene Sarazen (1922-32), Craig Wood (1941).

Walker Cup squad—Stanley E. (Ted) Bishop, Richard D. Chapman, George S. Hamer, jr., Fred Kammer, jr., Smiley L. Quick, Skee Riegel, Frank R. Stranahan, Marvin H. (Bud Ward.

Irish 880 Mark Broken

Francis Ouimet, 54, Enters British Amateur Fourth Round

At Charles Town.

Dear Folks:

Many of the old familiar faces are here. However, two missing are Jack Thomas, photo finish cameraman, and T. C. Bradley, chief steward. Both passed away during the winter. What does a jockey do on a day off? Well, Johnny Breen and Lee Haskell were here as spectators. They flew down from Delaware Park with Rufus Waple as pilot and Stanley Greene as copilot. Mother nature has done a good job around here. The grass was never greener and the mountains were in their best spring clothes. All you needed to feel tops was a couple of winners. Jockey Pappy Witmer is on hand—all of his 102 pounds—and as cockey as ever. The Lombardy poplar trees that I touted the track into planting some years ago are beginning to decorate the backstretch. Bill Cruse is the trackman here for the Racing Form with Wilson Ford as his assistant. Ray Haight is calling the charts for the Associated Press at the Atlantic City track. We will have a broadcast of the races out of here over Station WGAY, Silver Springs, if someone can dig up a sponsor. George Cook is handling the public address system. Johnny Tammaro, who broke his leg last December, rode a hard race his first time up this year. He must have a heart as big as a watermellon. See you on the rail. BILL.

Six Other Americans In Running

Carnoustie, May 28 (AP).—For a "nonplaying" captain, 54-year-old Francis Ouiment of Boston did all right today as he led six of his American Walker Cup stalwarts into the fourth round of the British Amateur championship over the sun-baked Carnoustie course.

While members of the younger set were falling out like flies to reduce the field of survivors to 32, the 193- American Open champion chugged serenely past a morning opponent and then fought to the nineteenth hole of a fiercely waged afternoon duel to eliminate a Carnoustie club member, J. R. Hosie.

Joining their weary but triumphant leader in the continuing chase of the coveted British crown was the fowerful sextet of Ted Bishop of South Natick, Mass.; Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash.; Willie Turnesa of White Plains, N. Y.; Dick Chapman of Pinehurst, N. C.; Frank Stranahan of Toledo, and Skee Riegel of Glendale, Calif.

Though the seven will be outnumbered better than 4 to 1 going into tomorrow's two 18-hole rounds, they still were regarded tonight as a potent threat to the bauble won last year by the Irishman Jimmy Druen.

Seven Americans Eliminated

Seven other Americans, including the Walker Cup squadmen Fred Kammer, jr., of Detroit, George Hamer of Columbus, Ga., and Bob Sweeny, jr., of New York and London, bit the dust today as the unwieldly field completed the second round and then played through the third round.

Hamer was slaughtered in the morning, 6 and 5, by his teammate, Riegel, who went on to score a third round win over Willie Murphy of Scotland, 3 and 2.

Sweeny knocked out Kammer, 5 and 3, in their morning match, only to fall victim of a surprise defeat in the afternoon at the deft hands of a Scottish physician, Dr. W. E. Scott, by 3 and 2.

Of the five American survivors besides Ouimet and Riegel, only one, Stranahan, had any great difficulty whalling his third-round opponent. The Toledo strong boy had to pull out a fine birdie four on the 503-yard home hole to subdue George Morgan, a virtually unknown player from Glasgow, 1 up.

Bishop 'Only Fair'

Ted Bishop, who yesterday eliminated Smiley Quick of Los Angeles, played only fairly good golf today in putting out Gerald Owens of Dublin, Ireland, 3 and 1.

Although he three-putted four greens, Bud Ward shot a 38 going out and easily turned back Ed Hamilton of London, 4 and 3. Willie Turnesa blew himself to a 41 on the out nine, yet won plenty of holes to spare over a Carnoustie Club member, Douglas Wright, by 5 and 4.

Dick Chapman put out one of France's final hopes, Philippe Boulart, 5 and 3, after turning three-up.

Cabrelli, Ferrante Sign '47 Eagle Pacts

Philadelphia, May 28 (AP).—Larry Cabrelli and Jack Ferrante have signed to play with the Philadelphia Eagles in the National Football League, General Manager Al Ennis announced today.

It will be the seventh season in the league for Cabrelli, a former Colgate star. Ferrante has captained the Eagles for the last four seasons.

Fort Worth Open Golf Tourney Called Off

Fort Worth, Tex., May 28 (AP).—Failure to agree on contract terms with the PGA has caused cancelation of the $10,000 Fort Worth Open Golf Tournament scheduled for the Glen Garden Country Club here September 25-28. Pro Smiley Rowland made the announcement this morning.

It was learned that the PGA contract called for an extra $1500 to pay official scorers, starters and other helpers.

STEVE CANYON

COME HERE, WOMAN!
...WHAT KIND OF SPORTS ARE YOU TWO? YOU GOT ALL BOOZED UP, BUT YOU DON'T OFFER A GAL EVEN A SNIFTER!
HEY!
SHE'S RIGHT!... GOTTA BOTTLE INNA GLOVE COMPARTMENT!
HE'S NICE! WHY AREN'T YOU NICE—LIKE HIM?
HAWHAW! Y'SEE WHO'SA HOT COOKIE ON THIS PARTY DON'CHA? DRINK UP, HONEY!
I HATE TO DRINK OUT OF A BOTTLE!... I'LL BET YOU KNOW HOW TO FOLD A PAPER CUP!
I MIGHT AS WELL BE UP IN THAT AIRPLANE FLYIN' OVER!
STUFFY IN HERE!... I'M GOING TO OPEN THE WINDOW WHILE YOU MAKE THAT PAPER CUP!...

JOE PALOOKA

WAIT A MINUTE, FOLKS... WHAT HAPPENED?
YOU LET US IN THERE, PALOOKA.
WE WANT THAT CROOK.
AN' HE POURS SOME STUFF ON HIS SLEEVE...THEN THAT CHEMICAL HE'S GOT TAKES IT OFF... BUT IT ONLY ACTS ON ONE KINDA MATERIAL...
LET ME AT 'IM.'
WAIT...HOW MUCH DOES HE OWE YOU?
IT DON'T TAKE SPOTS OFF...IT TAKES YOUR SLEEVE OFF.'
I PAID THEM OFF...THEY WERE GOING TO... WELL...ARE YOU THROUGH SELLING THAT STUFF...OR SHALL I SEND YOU HOME?
WHEW! TANKS, PALLY...I'M OUTA BIZNESS...HONEST, I'M BANKRUPTURED!

JACK ARMSTRONG

3 1947, The Register and Tribune Syndicate
THERE'S NOT MUCH I CAN TELL YOU, JACK, YOU PROBABLY HEARD ABOUT THE ROBBERY AT THE URANIUM PLANT LAST NIGHT.
SO THAT'S IT! WE'RE GOING AFTER THE BOW AND ARROW BOYS!
YES, BUT WHERE TO LOOK FOR THEM IS MORE THAN I KNOW.
WHY DON'T WE ASK OUR PLAYMATES, HERE?
FEEL LIKE TALKING, HANDSOME?
YEAH! BUT I'LL TALK WITH THIS!
BOB SCHERMERHORN

GOING TO WORK THE GARDEN WITHOUT BEING TOLD TO! WELL WONDERS NEVER CEASE?
MY BIRTHDAY IS SOON, DOODLE, AND GRANDMOTHER LOVES TO THINK OF ME AS GARDEN-MINDED!
I GUESS WE OFTEN MISJUDGE THEM.
HOLD STILL!
HAENIGSEN

MARY WORTH

BRICK, HONEY! LISTEN TO WHAT THE MAN SAYS!
YOUR TOOTHPASTE SLOGAN, "A MISS IS AS GOOD AS HER SMILE," WAS AN EASY WINNER IN OUR CONTEST, MISS BRICKER! I'M PLEASED TO HAND YOU THIS $300!
THE MONEY IS MIKE'S, MR. BARON...WE DEVELOPED THE IDEA TOGETHER!
I WOULDN'T FEEL RIGHT, TAKING EVEN ONE OF THESE LOVELY MINT LEAVES, FUNNY FACE...THOUGH I'LL ADMIT I COULD USE A FEW UNEARNED SHILLINGS!
THERE WAS SOME IDLE CHATTER ABOUT BUYING A RING..... REMEMBER?
SURE! THAT'S WHAT I HAD IN MIND ALL ALONG!...A DOWN PAYMENT ON A ROCK SO BIG YOU'LL HAVE TO CARRY YOUR ARM IN A SLING! BETTER DON SMOKED GLASSES FOR OUR DATE TONIGHT, BABY!

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Mary Alice MacDonald, of 723 Tewkesbury pl. nw., writes:

"They can't do this to me. I just swore off movies, yet here I am getting ready to go out to see 'Blaze of Noon.'

"I've just discovered that Sonny Tufts portrays a pilot named Roland Mac Donald. You have to admit that Roland is a rather unusual name to hang on a Scotsman—but it happens that I have a brother named Roland, and he was a pilot in the Ninth Air Force.

Miss MacDonald

"Men may question my female logic, but here I am headed for the movies, all atwitter at such a huge coincidence. I can hardly wait to see the picture. Silly, what?"

Mary Alice.

Dear Mary Alice:

Yep. But we wouldn't want you any other way. If women didn't do silly things, men wouldn't have a chance to feel so superior. W. E. G.

EARLY BIRD

Mrs. F. H. Jackson, of 106 Raymond st., Chevy Chase, Md., writes:

"I hope the birds don't get wise to daylight saving time. We have a woodpecker who used to beat a tattoo on the downspout outside my bedroom window at 5 a. m. Now he starts at 6, and it's not nearly so bad—because I have to get up at 6:15 anyway."

STREET SCENE

It was obvious that he was a panhandler, and panhandlers invariably take dead aim on me. Resignedly, I stopped to listen to his story.

He was from Texas, and he didn't like "store bought" cigarettes. He wanted to sell a half-filled pack of Luckies for a nickel, so that he could buy the "makings" and roll his own.

I gave him a nickel and started away, but he insisted that I take the Luckies. So I finally took them.

But as I walked away, I noticed that he had another open pack of Luckies in his shirt pocket—and now I'm wondering what the gimmick is. How does the guy make any money at that rate?

"CLARIFICATION"

This column recently blew the whistle on local public golf courses for barring boys under 14. As a result, we now have a "clarification" of the rule.

Children under 10 are not permitted on the courses because of the danger of their being hurt. But anybody who is 10 or over has a perfect right to play.

Officials promise that they will remind supervisory employes about the rule, and that no more eligible youngsters will be turned away.

We hear quite a bit these days about programs to combat juvenile delinquency. It might also be a good idea for each of us to cooperate on his own, without waiting for somebody to remind us of our responsibilities.

NO. 358

Here's a note from Mrs. David E. Scull, of 101 Elm ave., Takoma Park, Md.:

"Capital Transit operators are forever being criticized, so I'd like to even the score a bit by praising one.

"The art department of the Takoma Park Woman's Club Chartered a bus for a trip to the National Gallery. Driver No. 358 put up with his load of chattering women with great good humor and courtesy during the trip, and when it was over we gave him a unanimous vote of thanks."

Capital Transit records reveal that No. 358 is L. T. Powers, of the Northern Division.

He must be quite a guy. Most men have a tough time pleasing one woman.

COMMUNICATION

For obvious reasons the sender of this letter will remain anonymous. She writes:

"I have a solution of one man's housing problem. I will share my beautifully furnished apartment with a man who will marry me so that I may quit working. He must be presentable, make a good salary, and have a sense of humor.

"I prefer a college graduate, as I don't wish to be too intellectual for him."

P. W.

Dear P. W.:

There's little danger of your being too intellectual for anybody. W. E. G.

Grin and Bear It

"It's a well organized picket line, all right—but it ain't got the style and form the telephone strike had—!"

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Here is Charles Whitebrook's play-by-play description:

"West made the killing (almost) lead of a low heart.

Assuming on West's opening bid the club finesse was right, the spade finesse wrong, I must lose a spade, heart and diamond (discarding a diamond on the club ace)—but how about the other two spades after I lose the finesse and dummy is cleaned out of trumps?

"As to distribution, I felt certain that on the rebid West had six clubs, and three hearts to have underled the ace. The rest wasn't yet sure. So to preserve entries, I won the opening lead with heart king, and led a spade. Knowing the king was wrong, I took a long shot and when Schenken played the deuce I put up the nine.

"The ace and seven of hearts came back, and I unblocked with the queen and then overtook the 10 with the jack in my hand. If West had the blank diamond king, or if I could duck one round of diamonds and not have the suit returned."

As East was marked with long spades and diamonds, there was a chance to squeeze him in those two suits for the tenth trick.

"So I led a low diamond," Whitebrook continues, "the king crashed in, and I ducked on the board. A spade was returned, I won, took the club finesse, cashed the ace, tossing a diamond, and ruffed a club."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

NOW I'M SCARED! IF ERMINE'S PERFORMANCE WAS INTENDED TO BAIT TERRY INTO FOLLOWING HER, THEY MUST HAVE A SETUP ARRANGED TO TAKE CARE OF HIM AT WHEREVER ERMINE'S LEADING HIM.
OF COURSE! OH, I WAS THE SMART COP ON THIS ONE! WHILE I GIVE THEM TIME TO OUTSMART THEMSELVES, THEY USE IT TO OUTSMART ME!
IT WAS AS MUCH OUR FAULT AS YOURS. WE SHOULD HAVE LOOKED THE DEAL OVER, BEFORE WE JUMPED THROUGH THE LADY'S HOOP... BUT WE CAN KICK OURSELVES LATER— NOW, LET'S DO SOMETHING.
THERE'S LITTLE WE CAN DO. I'M ALERTING ALL GENDARMERIE POSTS TO BE ON THE LOOKOUT, BUT IT'S A FORLORN HOPE. AS FOR US, WE CAN SIT VERY STILL AND HOPE THAT, SOMEHOW, TERRY DIAGNOSES THEIR PLAY BEFORE THEY PULL THE TRIGGER.
...MEANWHILE...
GOLLY, DRIVER, CAN'T YOU STIR A LITTLE MORE ACTION OUT OF THIS CRATE? WE'VE BEEN TRAILING THAT CAR FOR A LONG TIME WITHOUT GAINING AN INCH ON IT.
THERE'S IS A VERY FAST VEHICLE, M'SIEU. IT IS MOST STRANGE THAT THEY HAVE NOT ACCELERATED THE SPEED AND LEFT US FAR BEHIND.

Donnie's class

Today at Donnie's school I met . . . The members of his class . . . And spoke to them a little while . . . To help the minutes pass . . . I met their lovely teacher too . . . And I could see at once . . . That in her happy fourth grade room . . . There could not be a dunce . . . They listened so attentively . . . And laughed with such good will . . . That every moment I was there . . . I really had a thrill . . . But what impressed me deeply was . . . How well they understood . . . The great importance in this life . . . Of being true and good . . . And I am sure the worries of . . . Our grown-up world will pass . . . As long as we have boys and girls . . . Like those in Donnie's class.

Man Is Very Happy With His Wonderful Wife, But She Keeps Him on Edge by Sulking Coldly Over Long Periods for Reasons Unknown to Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a wonderful wife and we are very happy except that she has spells of sulking. When she has one of these spells any apology I may offer is of no avail and sometimes I don't know what is wrong.

After the last such occasion I waited weeks until we were on the best of terms and then talked to her about it. I learned that our differences were trivial and the misunderstanding could have been cleared up immediately if only she had talked and not sulked.

What gets me is that no matter how sorry I am for anything I've said or done, it doesn't appease her. She withholds affection until her spell has worn off. I always make the first move and sometimes wonder if I am making a mistake in doing so. Occasionally I have to plead with her several times before she relents.

I would like your advice on how to treat her when she has these moods. J. W.

Serious Flaw In Character

DEAR J. W.: Your wife's periodic sulking is by no means a trivial fault. It is a major defect in character and puts her in one of three possible categories.

1. Either she is an incipiently paranoid personality, and her sulking the first major symptom of a drift toward mental illness. 2. Or she is harried and driven by neurotic emotional conflicts ingrained by early-life experiences; maybe unconsciously beset by terrific hostility toward others generally, which she tries to suppress in order to gain love and security,—with the result that her negative feelings leak out in "compulsive" pouting. 3. Or she is just an impossibly spoiled, selfish, bad mannered person.

In any case, as matters stand, she is bullying you unmercifully in a passive wordless way, while her moods last. And there is no long-term profit for either of you in letting her get away with that.

However, up to now, you at least have kept your own disposition sweet by your diligent efforts to clear the air when she's at her worst. That's the best I can say for your policy of cajoling her with tender solicitude while she withholds affection to keep you on the anxious seat. It doesn't do anything constructive for her.

Several Angles To Be Weighed

IF HER SULKING points to paranoic distress, she needs medical help immediately. Early diagnosis and preventive treatment might save her from incurable psychosis in later life. Neglect of symptoms over a period of years is the factor most to be feared in this type of illness.

If her misbehavior has a neurotic base—as suggested above in Point 2—psychiatric counsel would give her insight into old resurgent animosities that are causing trouble and thus relieve their compulsive grip on her personality. Short-term therapy might do the job, if she were honestly cooperative.

If she is bullying you just because she can, because it gives her a feeling of power to bring you to your knees, the proper treatment is to ignore her upstage moods,—as a wise parent or teacher would ignore a spoilsport child who was pouting conspicuously for special attention. That is, jog along with bland civility, asking no questions and offering no cajolery, letting her stay mad or get glad just as she chooses.

If she is neither an idiot nor mentally sick, she'd soon snap out of her moods if she found you politely indifferent at such times, I bet. So my advice is to try this method for a few months; and if it doesn't work, take the problem to a specialist—not only to find out what ails her; but also to learn why you're so abject when she's icy. M. H.

Flint—Rolig

In Duluth, Minn., yesterday, Miss Esther Rolig, daughter of Mr. and and Mrs. Karl Rolig of Prairie Lake, Minn., became the bride of George M. Flint, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Flint of Boston.

Both the bride and bridegroom lived in Washington until their marriage, the bride serving as secretary to the chief of the Topographic Branch of the Geological Survey. Mr. Flint joined the Geological Survey in 1940 and is at present in charge of that organization's program for nonmetallic mineral investigations in Alaska. After a short wedding trip to the Gulf Coast, Mr. and Mrs. Flint will go to Alaska for the summer.

The bride wore an ivory satin gown on Victorian lines, with a sweeping train cascading from a bodice of Alencon lace. Her veil of illusion was held by a tiara of seed pearls in a star design.

Mrs. J. Randolph Hukee was her sister's matron of honor and Mr. Flint served as best man for his son. A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Flint attended George Washington University. The bridegroom was graduated cum laude from Harvard University in 1940 and from George Washington University Law School in 1945 and was admitted to the District of Columbia Bar. During his senior year he was an editor of the George Washington Law Review.

Givens—Porter

In Takoma Park Presbyterian Church May 23, Miss Florence Annie Porter, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bennet Allen Porter, became the bride of Stuart Ray Givens, son of Dr. and Mrs. Willard E. Givens of Washington. Dr. R. Paul Schearrer officiated.

The bride wore a gown of white marquisette and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Louise G. Winfield, maid of honor, wore blue marquisette and carried pale pink roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Joyce Elizabeth Kephart and Miss Mary Ann Scott, wore pink marquisette and carried bouquets of pale pink carnations and blue delphinium.

Craig Brown was best man, and George Herndon and Bennet A. Porter, jr., were ushers.

A reception was held at the bride's home in Takoma Park, after which the couple left for a wedding trip to Charleston, S. C. They will make their home in Washington.

Mrs. Givens received a B.S. degree from Pennsylvania State College and is now working at Providence Hospital in this city as a medical technician. Mr. Givens served three years as a paratrooper in the Seventeenth and Eighty-Second Divisions during the war. He is now a junior at George Washington University.

Butzner—Beltzhoover

Miss Catharine Tod Beltzhoover, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Beltzhoover, jr., of Charles Town, W. Va., was married May 10th to Dr. William Walker Butzner, jr., of Fredericksburg, Va., at the home of the bride's parents. Dr. Butzner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Butzner of Fredericksburg. The Rev. James B. Storey performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was unattended. Dr. Byrd S. Leavell of Charlottesville, Va., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man.

The couple went to Sea Island, Ga., for their honeymoon and are now residing in Fredericksburg.

O'Brien—Burnham

Miss Barbara A. Burnham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Garvin of West Hartford, Conn., and Edward J. O'Brien, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. O'Brien of Pittsburgh, Pa., were married May 8 in St. John's Rectory, Silver Spring. Father F. J. Lauriola officiated, and a reception followed at Hotel 2400.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore white crepe and feather hat, and carried a bouquet of orchids. Mrs. Everett H. F. Felbe sister of the bride, was matron of honor, clad in blue with pink accessories.

Mr. O'Brien served his son as best man.

The couple will make their hom at 302 Penwood road, Silver Spring.

Mme. Ralea, Daughter, Plan Trip to France

Mme. Ralea, wife of the Romanian Minister and her daughter, Mlle. Catinca Ralea, will go to New York this week and on Saturday will sail aboard the Mauretania for France. They will go to Paris, where Mlle. Ralea will study for a college degree which she will receive in July. After that Mme. Ralea and her daughter will spend the remainder of the summer at a resort near the French capital.

During their five months stay in Washington, Mme. Ralea and her daughter have made a wide circle of friends who will welcome their return.

Mlle. Ralea attended Chevy Chase Junior College to get acquainted with American schools, and recently was interviewed on Jocelyn Freer's radio program when she gave her impressions of student life.

Condons Return

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Condon of Washington and Edgewater, Md., returned to their home in Edgewater yesterday after a visit to the St. Regis in New York.
